THE AUTHOR: Evgeny Sveshnikov (born 1950) is an active international player who currently represents Latvia. This Russian Grandmaster is widely recognised as a great openings expert. He has worked as a trainer for the 12th FIDE World Champion Anatoly Karpov, among others. He is especially known for having developed the system with ...e5 in the Sicilian defence which now bears his name, as well as for his work on the 2 c3 system for White against the Sicilian and the Advance Variation against the French Defence.

Foreword

It gives me great pleasure, for several reasons, to introduce the author of this book. In the first place, not only are we contemporaries but we also come from the same area: he comes from Cheliabinsk and I from neighbouring Zlatoust. So “Zhenya” Sveshnikov and I have known each other from childhood. We often played together in the junior teams of the Russian Federation, and then the Soviet Union. We both had the same trainer: Leonid Aronovich Gratvol, who was fanatically devoted to developing junior chess. It is perhaps thanks to him that the future grandmaster grew to love not only the work of chess analysis but also coaching, which he started relatively young. Usually, active players prefer tournament play to spending time and energy on other chess activities. Yet Evgeny Ellinovich has managed, not only to win over seventy international tournaments during his long career, but also to bring on the talents of dozens of grandmasters and masters.

Secondly I should mention the high quality of analysis of my old comrade, his conscientiousness and his basic honesty, which I came to appreciate many times in the years when Grandmaster Sveshnikov was one of my trainers during my difficult matches against Garry Kasparov.

Thirdly, I am anxious to stress that our collaboration continues in various ways. Evgeny Ellinovich helps me prepare for important events, teaches in the Anatoly Karpov School and willingly assists when I fly with colleagues to promote the game of chess in distant regions of Russia. I should add that he often does this on his own initiative as well; it is thanks to him that chess schools have revived in the Altai and South-Urals regions.

Finally I must mention his fanatical and stubborn work in researching the openings, which eventually brought him brilliant success. I recall that thirty years ago, during a USSR championship event, I said to him pityingly: “Zhenya, why do you keep torturing yourself by playing that Sicilian with ...e7–e5? Choose something simpler and you’ll play much more easily!” Today I have to admit that I was wrong: he was right not to listen to me: today everybody plays the Sveshnikov Variation! And as a fellow native of the Urals, I am pleased that this system is also known as the “Cheliabinsk Variation”.

Unfortunately, his monograph on the Sveshnikov Sicilian has until now remained practically the only publication by this grandmaster in the Russian language. But now finally this new theoretical work of Evgeny Sveshnikov is available. It is devoted to the popular 3. e5 system against the French Defence. Its popularity is once more largely due to its constant adoption by Sveshnikov, who has developed a fantastic feel for its nuances. It has helped him amass a plus-score (70% from over 150 games!) against such French Defence experts as Evgeny Bareev. The author believes that Black cannot equalise against the Advance Variation and to date no-one has been able to prove the contrary.

I consider this book to be a real manual, original in its conception and excellent in its execution. It not only teaches you how to play a specific variation of the French Defence, it also helps you understand many strategic ideas and their practical application in the middlegame, which for the majority of players is even more important.

A book by such an outstanding grandmaster and theoretician should prove useful to a wide readership. Club, Internet and weekend tournament players will find that Volume 1 will quickly give them a good grounding in what is really a very unpleasant (for Black) plan of attack. Masters (and even grandmasters) will find in Volume 2 a real master-class by the world expert in this variation.

Introduction

I have been using the 3. e5 system against the French Defence for about thirty years. How did this weapon become part of my arsenal? In the 1970s chess information was not as readily available as it is in today's computer age; it was difficult to obtain it and process it. I got into the habit of self-reliance, trusting solely my own ideas. I understood that the move 3. e5 was not objectively the strongest, but I had no desire to compete with such experienced French-specialists as, for instance, Vaganian, in the long and complex lines that arise after the main continuation 3. ♖c3. Thus I chose the 3. e5 system against the French (and similarly 2. c3 against the Sicilian) for practical reasons, since I understood that my opponents would be focusing their attention on the moves 3. ♖c3 and 3. ♖d2 which were much more popular at that time.

By the end of the 1980s I had accumulated enough theoretical and practical material on the 3. e5 system. I prepared a talk for my pupils which I ended up giving to over a thousand people. What I found interesting was this: when I tried to teach concrete variations to players of 2nd or even 1st Category, they just looked bored and remembered nothing. On the other hand, if I explained a typical idea by means of an illustrative game, they learnt it for ever. So for learning a new pattern it is best to use well-annotated games, in which the main ideas and plans of both sides can be clearly explained. When the pupil understands the general idea he can memorise the concrete variations more easily.

At the start of the 1990s I wrote a quite extensive article on 3. e5! for New in Chess Year Book. The very positive response to that article prompted me to undertake the present book project, well aware that it would require not just a lot of time ...

It is well known that the choice of a plan is based on the pawn structure in the centre and the dynamic placement of the pieces. In my opinion it is not very useful to talk about a particular pawn structure without placing it in the context of a concrete opening. A student who has not reached at least the minimum level of candidate master will have difficulty in assimilating such material. My teaching experience tells me that the material can be assimilated much better if it is taught in the context of an actual opening.

I decided to begin this book with an explanation of the main ideas for each side; each plan is illustrated with games and extensive commentary. Other things being equal, I have given preference to games by the players who were the first to employ a particular plan. Incidentally, most of the annotations were made without consulting a computer, and in this lies their chief merit, since all the ideas are "human". Of course, the variations were then checked later with analysis engines, to eliminate crude oversights. The computer is a valuable assistant for the technical work but in the realm of ideas it is actually, with rare exceptions, of little use.

Further on we present the reader with a series of test positions and solutions to reinforce what has been learnt. Since one of the most common themes of the Advance Variation is to blockade the centre and play against the weakened dark squares, I have included a chapter on this topic.

I wanted to write a book that would be interesting and instructive not just to ordinary players but also to candidate masters, masters and even grandmasters. The practical strength of a player and his understanding of the opening are often at different levels. It often happens that even experienced players go astray in unfamiliar positions. That is why even for them it is useful to reflect once again upon the “why”, the general bases underlying the concrete variations that they have memorised.

For advanced players who have studied the first two chapters of Volume 1, I have provided in Volume 2 some reference material in tabular “Encyclopaedia” format, plus theoretically important games with light notes only – to encourage independent analysis. I have also drawn attention to what at present appear to be the most critical positions.

Chess is not just a sport – it is also an element of culture, which is why I usually begin my opening studies with a historical review. I consider it essential to pay tribute to all those who have contributed to the development of this variation, and to trace its development.

Volume 1 (Basic Course) consists of:

- 1) Historical overview
- 2) Explanation of the plans for both sides through games annotated in detail

3) A chapter on blockade

4) Test positions

After assimilating this material you can move onto a more professional study (“one step at a time”).

Volume 2 (Advanced Course) consists of:

1) Theoretically important games for independent analysis

2) Encyclopaedia

3) Conclusions: the likely future development of the 3. e5 system

4) Games for further study

5) The latest theoretical developments

Naturally I hope that this two-volume work will become not only a manual for club, Internet and weekend tournament players, but will also prove a useful reference for masters and even grandmasters.

That I have been able to bring this immensely time-consuming but equally interesting work to a successful conclusion is very much due to the efforts of International Master Vladimir Barsky, whom I should like to thank sincerely here for his collaboration in the development and completion of this book project.

Chapter 1

For and against 3. e5

I am convinced that one of the most interesting positions in chess is the initial position. Therefore I advise you to think about your actions from your very first moves; do not just thoughtlessly follow the advice of the 'authorities'.

1. e4 e6

Strictly speaking, this is not the strongest of moves; after all White can immediately capture the centre by means of the move 2. d4. Furthermore, Black will find it difficult to develop his light-squared bishop. On the other hand, Black presents no weaknesses; if Black plays 1...e5 instead, the e-pawn immediately becomes a target. It is possible that the best move is 1...c5! hindering 2. d4. Nevertheless, recently Black has been achieving decent results with the French Defence and many young grandmasters have adopted it as a part of their opening repertoire.

2. d4 d5

Now White has three main continuations: 3. ♖d2, 3. ♖c3 and 3. e5. In the 19th century 3. exd5 exd5 4. c4 was often played, aiming for a very rapid opening of the position, but practice has shown that after 4...♟f6 5. ♖c3 ♜b4! White cannot count on any advantage.

3. ♖d2 – is the move played by grandmaster Siegbert Tarrasch, which reached the peak of its popularity during the 1970s and 1980s. However, on close analysis we can see that this move breaks the principles of opening development. Specifically, White is not really fighting for the centre (note that the d4 pawn is weakened), no attention is being paid to development (the knight blocks the c1 bishop and the queen) and in fact the only principle being observed is that of safety. But safety should really be Black's concern and White, with the advantage of the first move, ought to attack, otherwise the advantage evaporates. Thus, having somewhat paraphrased Wilhelm Steinitz, can one characterise the move 3. ♖d2.

Why then was this move so popular; didn't the grandmasters understand its shortcomings? Fashion is mostly to blame, since the then champion of the world, Anatoly Karpov was a supporter of this line at the highest level. But his encounters with Victor Korchnoi, in which Karpov did not win a single French, together with recent practice, have shown that with 3...c5! Black practically equalises. Further proof of the strength of 3. ♖d2 c5 can be found in the games of Evgeny Bareev, in which he regularly obtains good counterplay as Black with this line. In 1984 when Karpov played 3. ♖c3 against Agdestein, the attention of other grandmasters was also drawn in this direction.

Undoubtedly, 3. ♖c3! is the most principled and also the strongest move, obeying all the principles of development in the opening. I played this line when I was a master at the end of the 1960s and the beginning of the 1970s, but then I switched to 3. e5. After 3. ♖c3, positions arise which are very complex, both strategically and tactically. At that time many tense games were played with it. By playing 3. ♖c3 therefore, you are giving a head start to a well-prepared and knowledgeable opponent. But 3. e5 is quite another matter.

3. e5

This move has been known since the time of Gioacchino Greco (1600–1634). Its advantages are obvious:

- 1) it gains space;
- 2) the light-squared bishop on c8 is blocked in;
- 3) the e5 pawn takes away the important f6 square, after which it is not easy for Black to develop his kingside, whilst there is the potential for White to generate an attack in this area of the board.

But there are also disadvantages:

- 1) by making a second move in succession with the same pawn White loses time;
- 2) pawn chains are formed and the position acquires a semi-closed character, which means that White will find it more difficult to use the advantage of the first move.
- 3) Black does not have a weak pawn in the centre, and so White does not have an immediate target to attack.

Now I propose to make a short excursion into history. Have a look at the course taken by one of the earliest surviving games in which White adopted the 3. e5 plan against the French Defence.

Game 1

Greco – N.N.

1620

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 cxd4?!

Of course, the exchange on d4 is premature, as now White acquires the c3 square for the knight. However, we should not reproach N. N. for this mistake as Black repeated it in much later games.

5. cxd4 ♖b4+ 6. ♘c3 ♗xc3+

The exchange of dark-squared bishops is one of White's main ideas in this system, since such an exchange seriously weakens the dark-square complex in the black camp. And here Black voluntarily parts with this key defender.

7. bxc3 ♘c6 8. ♗d3 ♘ge7 9. f4± ♘f5 10. ♘f3 0–0 11. g4 ♗h4 12. 0–0 ♘xf3+ 13. ♖xf3± ♗d7

It is interesting to see how this “prehistoric” position looks through the eyes of an un-sentimental computer: 13...♖a5 14. ♗b2 b6 (14...f5 15. exf6 ♗xf6 16. g5→) 15. ♖h3 (15. ♖e2 f5 16. exf6 ♗xf6 17. g5±) 15...h6 (15...g6 16. f5+–) 16. g5+–.

14. ♖h3 g6

15. f5

White has a decisive attack: his opponent is simply powerless to defend the dark squares.

15...exf5 16. gxf5 gxf5 17. ♗xf5 (17. ♗h6+–) 17...♗xf5

17...♘h8 would not have saved the game:
 18. ♘h1 ♖g8 19. ♗xh7+ ♘xh7 20. ♖h5+ ♔g7
 21. ♕h6+ ♘h8 22. ♕f8#.

18. ♕xf5

Black resigned.

Louis Paulsen and Aaron Nimzowitsch each made an enormous contribution to the development of this system. You will find a detailed appreciation of Nimzowitsch in the chapter devoted to the problems of blockade, but we shall talk about Paulsen now.

The German chess player Louis Paulsen (15.01.1833–18.08.1891) was born in Nassengrund (Germany) into a chess-loving family. His older brother was a strong player and a participant in many international chess congresses. His sister Amalia was also a good player. Louis was a merchant by profession. In 1854 he and his brother emigrated to America.

One of Louis Paulsen's first tournaments in his new country was the American Chess Congress of 1857; he lost in the final to Paul Morphy, 2–6. This defeat should be counted as a success rather than a failure for Paulsen. He was only twenty-four years old and his development as a player was slow, unlike that of the “meteor” Morphy. Paulsen reached his peak in his late forties.

In 1860 Paulsen returned to his homeland. Two years later he played his first match with the “uncrowned world champion” Anderssen. The duel became a dogged battle and ended in a draw (+3 –3 =2); with a huge effort of will Anderssen won the last two games and saved the match. These eternal rivals met in matches twice more and on both occasions Paulsen was victorious: in 1876 (+5 –4 =1) and again in 1877 (+5 –3 =1). He also finished above his distinguished rival in many tournaments. The total count of their meetings is +20 –17 =7 in favour of Paulsen.

Whilst Anderssen is considered an unsurpassed master of attack, Paulsen can be called the founder of the modern approach to studying the openings. He was a chess theoretician, a chess scientist if you wish. His opening schemes were studied not just by his contemporaries but also by many later generations of chess players. Some of the systems introduced into practice by Paulsen remain relevant to this day (!). This applies to the French Defence with 3. e5 and the system in the Sicilian Defence named after him (1. e4 c5 2. ♖f3 e6 3. d4 cxd4 4. ♗xd4 a6). Paulsen used the Boleslavsky System (1. e4 c5 2. ♗f3 ♗c6 3. d4 cxd4 4. ♗xd4 ♗f6 5. ♗c3 d6 6. ♕e2 e5!) five times: seventy years before Boleslavsky!

If Chigorin is justly considered the foremost nineteenth century exponent of the open games, it was Paulsen who undoubtedly possessed the deepest understanding of the Sicilian and French Defences; in this respect he was ahead of his time by a whole century. In modern databases you can find more than twenty of Paulsen's games as White featuring the 3. e5 variation of the French Defence. White's play in the following game is impressive. Seventy-three years later Wolfgang Unzicker repeated Paulsen's first ten moves, and after 115 years the position after 10. ♗a4 became an opening tabia!

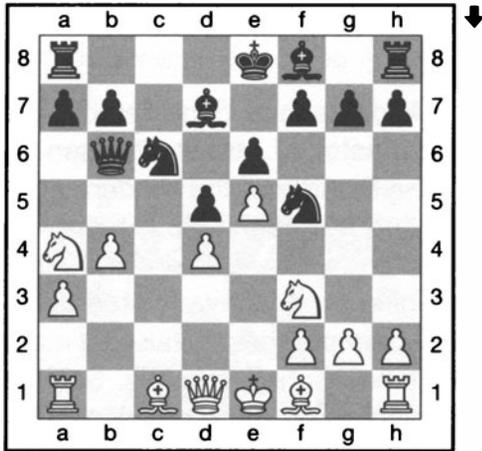

Game 2

14. ♖xc5 0–0 15. ♗d3 (with the threat
16. ♗xf5 exf5 17. ♖xd5) 15...♘fe7

White has cramped Black on the queenside and Black's last move is a mistake that allows Paulsen to launch a direct attack on the black king.

16. ♗xh7+! ♗xh7

If 16...♗h8 White's pressure continues unabated, e.g. 17. ♘g5 g6 18. ♖f3 ♘g8 19. ♗xg8 ♗xg8 20. ♖h3 ♖fd8 21. ♖h7+ ♗f8 22. ♖xf7#.

17. ♘g5+ ♗g6

The alternatives are no better: 17...♗g8 18. ♖h5 ♖fe8 19. ♖h7+ ♗f8 20. ♖c3! or 17...♗h6 18. ♗c1 (with the threat ♘xe6+) 18...♖c8 (18...♗g6 19. ♖g4 ♖c8 20. ♘xe6 ♗h7 21. ♖xg7#) 19. ♖g4 ♗g6 (19...♘f5 20. ♖h3+ ♗g6 21. ♖h7#) 20. ♘xe6+ ♗h7 21. ♖xg7#.

18. ♖g4 f5 19. ♖g3 ♖c8 20. ♖c3

Time to bring up the reserves. The premature 20. ♘xe6+? does not work: 20...♗f7 21. ♖xg7+ ♗xe6 (21...♗e8?? 22. ♖xf8#) 22. ♖h6+ ♗f7 23. ♖f6+ ♗e8–+.

20...f4 21. ♖g4 ♘f5 22. ♖h3 ♖h8
23. ♘xe6+ ♗f7 24. ♖xf5+ ♗e7

The king has no safe square: 24...♗e8 25. ♖xh8+; 24...♗g8 25. ♖xh8+ ♗xh8 26. ♖h5+ ♗g8 27. ♘g5 ♗f5 28. g4 fxg3 29. hxg3 ♗f8 30. ♖h8+ ♗e7 31. ♖xg7+ ♗d8 32. ♖h8#.

25. ♖g5+ ♗xe6

Or 25...♗f7 26. ♖xg7+ ♗xe6 (26...♗e8 27. ♖xh8#) 27. ♖f6#.

26. ♖g6+ ♗e7 27. ♖xg7

and Black resigned in view of 27...♗d8 (27...♗e6 28. ♖f6#) 28. ♖xh8+. A classical example of play on both wings!

Paulsen carried out the idea of blockading the black centre pawns many years before Nimzowitsch!

White could have achieved a decisive advantage by 33. g3 d4 34. ♜e7 ♝f7 35. ♜d6. Paulsen managed to lose this game, but the result takes nothing away from his opening strategy.

Paulsen's games against Adolf Schwarz became a real theoretical duel in the then popular line 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♞c6 5. ♞f3 f6 6. ♙d3 fxe5 7. dxe5 g6. They exchanged points until finally in the Vienna tournament of 1882 Paulsen employed the plan of 8. h4! ♙g7 9. h5 and it was clear that the variation favoured White.

White played the entire following game at the level of a present-day master, bringing all debate about this variation to an end.

Paulsen's contributions to the development of this variation are so great that I think that 3. e5 against the French should be called the Paulsen-Nimzowitsch system. Thirty to fifty years later Aaron Nimzowitsch added many new ideas.

The 3. e5 system is often linked with the name of the first World Champion Wilhelm Steinitz. Indeed, he used 3. e5 three times in the great tournament of Vienna 1898, but in the first two games against Burn and Maróczy he did not even manage to equalise.

Vienna 1898

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3

In his third 3. e5 game in this tournament Steinitz gave up the centre in return for piece pressure on the squares d4 and e5: 4. dxc5!? ♖c6 5. ♗f3 ♕xc5 6. ♕d3 ♗ge7 7. 0–0 ♗g6 8. ♖e1 ♕d7 9. c3 a5 10. a4 ♖b8 11. ♗e2 ♕b6 12. ♗a3 0–0 13. ♗b5 ♗a7 14. ♕e3 ♕xe3 15. ♖xe3 ♗xb5 16. axb5 b6 17. ♗d4 f5 18. f4± (Steinitz–Showalter, Vienna 1898). Later this plan was adopted by many players, including Nimzowitsch and Keres, but Louis Paulsen got there first!

4...♗c6 5. ♗f3 ♖b6 6. ♕e2

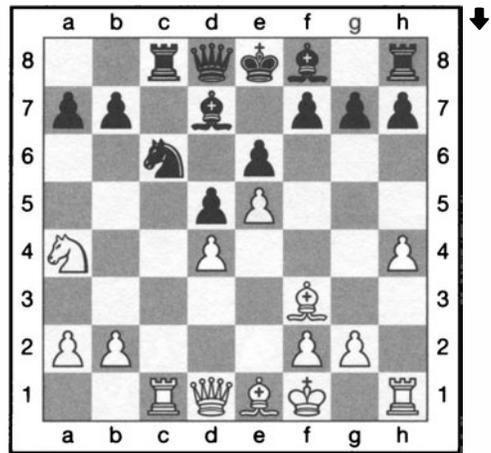

6. ♕d3?! cxd4! 7. cxd4 ♕d7 8. ♕c2 ♗b4 9. 0–0 ♗xc2 10. ♖xc2 ♗e7 11. ♗c3 ♖c8 12. ♕e3, and now instead of 12...♗c6?! (Steinitz–Burn, Vienna 1898) 12...♗f5 ♖ would have been stronger.

6...cxd4

A later game by Steinitz went: 6...♕d7 7. 0–0 ♖c8 8. b3 (Here White could have gained an edge with 8. dxc5 ♕xc5 9. b4 but, having neglected this possibility, for the entire game he had to struggle for equality.) 8...cxd4 9. cxd4 ♗ge7 10. ♗a3 ♗f5 11. ♗c2 ♗b4 12. ♗e3 ♗xe3 13. fxe3 ♕e7 14. ♗e1 0–0 15. a3 ♗c6 16. b4 f6 17. exf6 ♕xf6 ♖ (Steinitz–Showalter, London 1899).

7. cxd4 ♗h6 8. ♗c3 ♗f5 9. ♗a4 ♖a5+ 10. ♗f1 ♕d7 11. ♕d2 ♖d8 12. ♕e1 ♖c8 13. ♖c1 ♗h4 14. ♗c3 ♗xf3 15. ♕xf3 ♖b6 16. ♗a4 ♖d8 ♖ (16...♖xd4? 17. ♖xc6±) 17. h4

(see next diagram)

17...♗xe5! ♖ 18. ♖xc8 ♖xc8 19. ♕e2 ♗c4 20. b3 ♕xa4 21. bxa4 ♕e7.

White's position is lost, but Steinitz managed to save it. As we can see, the first World Champion had more pain than pleasure with this variation.

The picture presented by Nimzowitsch is quite different. He further developed Paulsen's and Steinitz's idea of giving up the pawn centre d4/e5 after 3. e5 c5 4. dxc5 with the aim of occupying (blockading) the central squares with his pieces. Thanks to Nimzowitsch the 3. e5 system rose considerably in popularity.

His games against Salwe and Levenfish at the tournament in Carlsbad 1911 are well known; they have become cornerstones of the theory of blockade. They can be found in the chapter on blockade later in this volume. And now I should like to bring to your attention another game from the same tournament, a game in which Nimzowitsch had to solve difficult problems. This was a confrontation between two of the greatest openings experts of the early twentieth century. Rubinstein was at the height of his powers, whilst Nimzowitsch was still gaining experience and was not yet as strong in the opening as his redoubtable opponent. This was one of the rare occasions when Nimzowitsch lost the battle of the opening.

Game 6

Nimzowitsch – Rubinstein

Carlsbad 1911

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6
5. ♗f3 ♚b6 6. ♔d3?!

Nimzowitsch was experimenting creatively. Modern theory frowns on this move and prefers 6. a3!? or 6. ♔e2.

6...cxd4!

Black is familiar with the subtleties of this system; weaker is 6...♔d7?! 7. dxc5 ♔xc5 8. 0-0 ±.

7. cxd4 ♔d7! 8. ♔e2

Nimzowitsch decides against sacrificing a pawn with 8. ♗c3!? ♗xd4. Modern theory agrees with this decision. Now we have a well-known position with White a tempo down, since he could have played 6. ♔e2.

8...♗ge7 9. b3 ♗f5 10. ♔b2 ♔b4+
11. ♗f1 h5

Rubinstein has played the opening well and has a slight advantage.

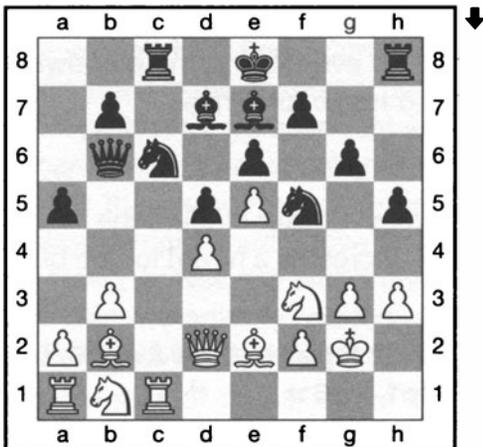

12. g3 ♖c8 13. ♗g2 g6?!

Black could have played more actively with 13...h4!? †.

14. h3 ♔e7 15. ♚d2 a5

15...♔f8!? was also interesting: 16. g4 hxg4 17. hxg4 ♖xh1 18. ♗xh1 ♔h6 19. ♚d1 (19. ♚d3 ♗b4 20. ♚d1 ♖c2 ♢) 19...♗fe7=.

16. ♖c1

16...♔f8!

Rubinstein makes the right decision and brings the bishop to h6 to exploit the vulnerable white heavy pieces on the c1–h6 diagonal.

17. ♚d1 ♔h6 18. ♖c3 0-0?!

Black should have considered the more active 18...g5!? with the possible continuation 19. g4 hxg4 20. hxg4 ♗h4+ (20...♗fe7 21. ♗a3 ♗g6 22. ♗b5) 21. ♗xh4 gxh4 22. ♗a3 ♗e7 23. ♖xc8+ ♗xc8=.

Rubinstein decided simply to complete his development, after which Nimzowitsch outplayed his adversary. Yet at this time Rubinstein was one of the best players in the world!

19. g4 ♗fe7

White is not threatening to capture on h5, since then the e7 knight could return to f5.

20. ♗a3= ♗b4 21. ♗c2 ♖xc3 22. ♔xc3
♗xc2 23. ♚xc2 ♖c8

Black has seized control of the c-file but he lacks an entry square.

24. ♚b2

24. g5 ♔f8 25. ♚d2 ♗c6=.

24...♔b5 25. ♔xb5 ♚xb5 26. ♔d2
♔f8 27. ♖c1 = hxg4 28. hxg4 ♖c6
29. ♚a3!? ♖xc1 (29...♗c8!? 30. ♚b2
♗e7=) 30. ♚xc1 ♗c6 31. ♔h6 ♔e7
32. ♔g5 ♚e2

It would have been better to withdraw the bishop to f8; then White could not really hope for more than a draw.

33. ♔xe7 ♗xe7 34. ♚f4± ♚e4?!

Rubinstein commits an error: the queen exchange creates a weakness on e4, and leaves Black with a difficult knight ending. The correct continuation was 34...♗c6!
35. ♗g5 ♗d8 36. ♚f3 ♚xf3+ 37. ♗xf3±.

35. ♚xe4 dxe4 36. ♗d2 ♗c6 37. ♗xe4
♗xd4 38. f4

38. ♗d6!? b5 39. f4 g5! 40. fxg5 ♗g7
41. ♗g3 ♗g6 42. ♗f4 ♗e2+=.

38...b5?!

38...d2!? 39. c3 d1 40. d3 g5!?
41. fxg5 d3 42. e4 d2+ 43. d4 dxg4±.

39. c2± a4 40. bxa4 bxa4 41. d3?!

Nimzowitsch has outplayed Rubinstein but this allows counterplay. 41. e3±, was correct, e. g. 41...d2+ 42. d2 d4 43. d6+ (43. a3 d5 44. d6+ dx6 45. exf6 g5±) 43...c7 44. a3 d6 45. g5 d4 46. c3 d2+ 47. b4 dx4 48. xa4 c8 49. b5 e7 50. a4 d8 51. a5 c8 52. d8+-.

41...g5!

The only way to create counterplay. Instead 41...a3 would have lost: 42. e3 d2+ 43. d2 d4 44. g5 c8 45. e3 e7 46. d4 d2+ 47. c4 e1 48. d2 d7 49. b4 c6 50. xa3 d5 51. b4 e4 52. a4+-.

42. e3

Also good was 42. xa4 gx4 43. d5 c7 44. d3 f6 45. exf6+ c6 46. dx4 c5 47. c3 e5 48. dh3±.

42...d2+ 43. d3 d4+ 44. c4 xa2 45. xa2 gx4 46. d3

But not 46. d4 because of 46...c7 47. e4 f6 48. exf6+ c6 49. dx4 e5+ 50. c3 a3=.

46...c7

If 46...a3 47. b3!+- (47. d3 c7 48. e4 f6 49. exf6+ c6 50. dx4 e5+=) 47...c7 48. d4 f3 49. xa3 c6 50. b4+-.

47. d4 c6 48. b4 f3 49. xa4 f2 50. dx2 c5 51. d3??

This lets the victory slip. Instead White could have won with 51. b4 c4 52. d3+ c7 (52...e4 53. c4+-) 53. d5 c6 54. d7+- f6 55. exf6 c6 56. c5 c7 57. d6+-.

It must be said that Nimzowitsch's results would have been much better if he had not slipped up like this on a fairly regular basis.

51...f6!= 52. exf6 c6 53. d2 c5 54. b4 e5 55. c4 e4 Draw.

Three years later in one of the strongest tournaments of the early twentieth century the second world champion Emanuel Lasker was faced with the 3. e5 system for practically the only time in his long career. Lasker demonstrated a good method against the plan of 3. e5 c5 4. dxc5.

Game 7

Tarrasch – Lasker
St. Petersburg 19141. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. dxc5

Tarrasch was often considered to be a disciple of Steinitz, a populariser of his ideas. Perhaps Tarrasch chose 4. dxc5 because Steinitz had played it. However, as we know, the real inventor of this plan was Louis Paulsen! Incidentally, Steinitz often highlighted the importance of Paulsen's ideas in the opening and said that he (Steinitz) and his contemporaries had learnt a lot from Paulsen. From the modern point of view, 4. dxc5 is premature, since it considerably simplifies Black's development problems.

4...d6 5. d3 c5 6. d3 f5!?

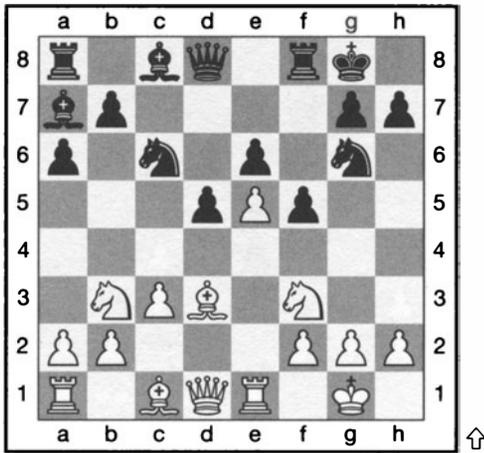

This interesting continuation reduces White's attacking chances on the kingside. On the other hand it permanently weakens the e6 pawn. Now even losing the e5 pawn would not be so tragic for White.

7. c3 a6

Prophylaxis: Lasker hinders the manoeuvre b4–b5 and creates a haven for the bishop on a7.

8. bd2 ge7 9. d3 a7 10. 0–0 0–0 11. e1 d6±

(see next diagram)

Both sides have made very natural moves and a position offering chances to both sides has arisen. White must now concern himself with the safety of his e5 pawn. Black has solved his opening problems, so Lasker's plan deserves attention.

12. ♖bd4 ♙b8 13. ♜xc6 bxc6 14. ♔h1?! (14. b4, 14. c4) 14...a5 15. b3 c5 16. ♙a3 ♜b6 17. ♜d2 ♙b7 18. ♜g5 ♙a7 19. h4 ♜d8 20. ♜g3 ♜e8 21. ♜h2?! (21. ♜g5f) 21...♜e7 22. f4 ♜c8 23. ♜f3 ♔h8 24. ♜g5 ♜g8 25. ♙e2 ♜e7 26. ♜ad1 ♜df8 27. ♜d2 ♜h6 28. ♜ed1 ♜e8 29. ♔h2 ♜c7 30. ♔h3 ♜dc8 31. ♙b2 ♙c6 32. ♙f3 ♜b8 33. ♙a3 ♜g8 34. ♙e2 ♜h6 35. ♜e1 ♜d8 36. ♜g3 ♜b8 37. ♜e1 ♜d8 38. ♜g3 ♜b8 39. ♜e1 ♜d8 Draw.

The 3. e5 system has appeared in the games of other world champions. On the white side we find Capablanca, Smyslov, Tal and Kasparov; for Black – Botvinnik and Petrosian; Alekhine, Euwe and Spassky played it with both colours. You will find examples of their skill in Volume 2 in the chapter “Theoretically important games for independent analysis”. As we can see, the variation's history goes back more than a century and the names of the players mentioned above testify to its quality. Nevertheless the world champions played it only sporadically and thus their role in developing its theory was limited.

A huge number of ideas, some of which we are already familiar with, stem from Aaron Nimzowitsch. He worked on the variations 3...c5 4. c3 ♜c6 5. ♜f3 ♜b6 6. ♙e2 and 6. ♙d3 and also invented the gambit 1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. ♜f3 ♜b6 (4...♜c6) 5. ♙d3 cxd4, introduced in the game Nimzowitsch-Leonhardt, San Sebastian 1912 (game 35 on page 68). This gambit was played by such well-known theoreticians as Rauzer, Alekhine, Levenfish, Keres, Bondarevsky and Pachman – surely an impressive list! That is why in the near future it can be expected that this sharp variation will once more attract the attention of chess players.

I consider the Soviet master Vsevolod Rauzer to be a real chess scientist. He was well versed in the principles of opening play and generally handled the openings superbly. It is sufficient to recall his attack against the Sicilian Defence and his deep manoeuvres in the Ruy Lopez. Today's players still use these ideas of his, which no computer can refute. His ideas have become pure chess science, classical models which are incapable of improvement. However, this cannot be said about the following game, which was simply an interesting experiment.

Game 8

Rauzer – Grigoriev

Odessa 1929

1. d4 e6 2. e4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. ♜f3 ♜c6 5. ♙d3!? cxd4

Nimzowitsch employed this gambit four times, scoring four wins! The sacrifice brought Paul Keres five wins, and only a single loss against Euwe. I think this gambit could be named after Keres, who played it about ten times.

6. 0-0 f6

A logical move – Black immediately attacks the white centre. It is also possible to play 6...♖g6 7. ♖e1 ♗g6 8. ♗bd2 (or 8. a3 ♗e7 9. ♗bd2 0-0 10. ♗b3 f5) 8...♗e7 9. ♗b3 0-0 10. ♗bxd4 ♗d7.

7. ♖e2 fxe5 (7...♗c7!?) 8. ♗xe5 ♗f6 9. ♗g5

White's free development looks very attractive, but his priority should have been to hold the e5 square. However, the alternatives also seem to give Black the edge: 9. ♗f4 ♗d6 10. ♗d2 0-0 11. ♖ae1 ♗c7, 9. ♗b5 ♗c7 10. c3 d3!, 9. ♗d2 ♗xe5 10. ♗xe5 ♗d6 11. ♗xd4 e5. Thus instead of 7. ♖e2 it would have been better to play 7. ♗b5!?, as Alekhine did against Euwe in the next game.

9...♗d6?

Now White establishes firm control of e5 and gains a clear advantage. Instead 9...♗xe5! 10. ♗xe5 ♗d6! 11. ♗xd4 (11. ♗b5+? ♗f7) 11...0-0 12. ♗d2 ♗c7 13. ♗h4 h6) would have left him fighting for equality.

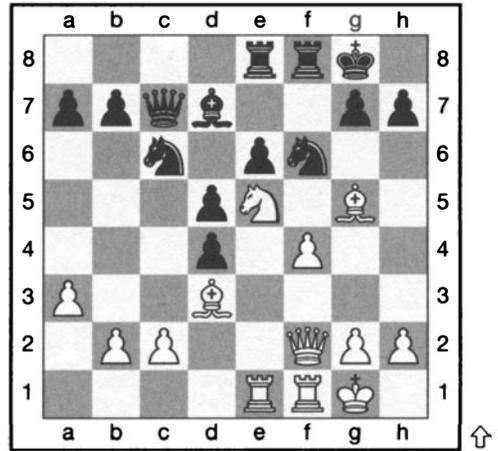

10. f4 0-0 11. ♗d2 ♗c7 12. ♖ae1 ± ♗b4 (12...♗b6) 13. a3 ♗xd2 14. ♗xd2 ♗d7 15. ♗f2

15. ♗xd7 ♗xd7 16. b4 ♖.

15...♖ae8?

(see next diagram)

Correct was 15...♗xe5 16. ♖xe5 (16. fxe5? ♗e4 17. ♗h4 ♖xf1+ 18. ♖xf1 ♗xe5) 16...♗b6 17. ♗h4 ♗e4. Now White launches a decisive attack.

16. ♗xf6 ♖xf6 17. ♗g4! ♖ff8 18. ♗h4+-h6 19. ♖f3 ♖e7 20. ♗xh6+ gxh6 21. ♖g3+ ♖g7 22. ♗xh6 ♖ff7 23. ♗h7+ ♗f8 24. ♗h8+ ♗e7 25. ♖xg7 ♗xf4 26. ♖f1 ♗e3+ 27. ♗h1 ♖xg7 28. ♗f8#.

It is well known that Alexander Alekhine attentively studied Soviet chess books and magazines and he was surely familiar with Rauzer's game. But despite White's impressive victory in the above game, the fourth world champion preferred another plan at an early stage.

Game 9

Alekhine – Euwe
Nottingham 1936

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. ♗f3 ♗c6 5. ♗d3 cxd4 6. 0-0 f6 7. ♗b5!?

Immediately fighting for the e5 square.

7...♗d7 8. ♗xc6 bxc6

It would have been bad to recapture with the bishop 8...♗xc6 in view of 9. ♗xd4 fxe5? (9...♗d7 ±) 10. ♗h5+ g6 11. ♗xe5+-.

9. ♗xd4

9. ♗xd4 c5.

9...fxe5 10. ♗xe5 ♗f6

10...♗b8 11. ♗f4 ±.

11. ♗f4 ♗c5 12. ♗c3

The knight is going to fight for control of the c5 square, but 12. ♖bd2 looks more logical.

12...0-0 13. ♖g3 ♜e7

The manoeuvre 13...♗g4!? 14. ♜e2 e5!? ≠ deserved consideration, as did the idea of deploying the queen on the light squares with 13...♜e8 ≠.

14. a3 a5 15. ♝fe1 ♝a7?

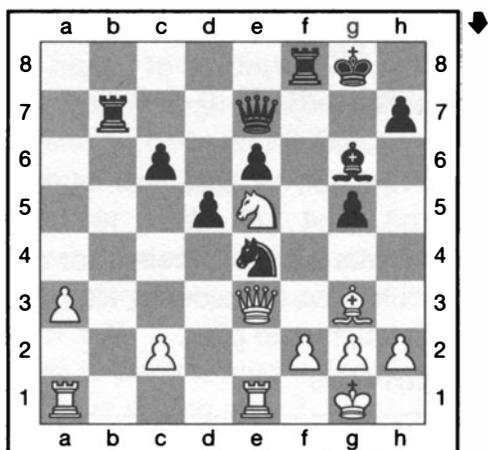

This seems unnatural; 15...♗g4 16. ♜e2 ♝f5 was better.

16. ♗a4 ♝b7 17. ♜c3 ♖a7 18. ♜xa5 ♗e4

Black has definite compensation for the pawn. Also interesting was 18...♝a8 ♞.

19. ♜a6 ♖e8 20. b4 g5 (20...♖h5!? ♞)

21. ♗c5 ♖xc5 22. bxc5 ♗xc5 23. ♜e2 ♗e4 24. ♜e3 ♖g6 25. ♗e5

In this game Alekhine teetered on the edge of the precipice but it all worked out for him. He returned the pawn in order to control the dark squares and gain a slight advantage. Euwe never managed to make use of the active position of his pieces.

25...c5 26. ♗xg6 hxg6 27. f3 ♗xg3 28. hxg3 ♗f7 29. a4 ...

... and White won on the 81st move.

These games show that White cannot count on an advantage from the gambit. Alekhine's play is obviously sufficient for equality, but Rauzer's plan not even that. It is interesting that databases show White scoring about 60% with this gambit, compared with a 50% score for the 3. e5 system as a whole. These statistics indicate that you should include this gambit in your repertoire for practical reasons rather than for its objective strength.

Another interesting idea of Nimzowitsch's involves the early development of the queen: 1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. ♜g4!?. The exclamation mark is for the originality of the idea, the question mark for its objective value. This line is examined in more detail in Volume 2 in the annotations to the game Sveshnikov – Komarov, Vrnjačka Banja 1999 (game 28 on page 57). We should acknowledge Nimzowitsch's analytical work and his efforts to promote the 3. e5 variation among other chess players. You can learn more about this in the chapter "The many facets of the blockade".

After Nimzowitsch's death the move 3. e5 was forgotten for a long time and appeared only sporadically. It was only in the 1960s–1970s that the future grandmasters Igor Zaitsev and Victor Kupreichik enriched this ancient variation with new ideas.

Game 10

Kupreichik – Korchnoi

Sochi 1970

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 b6

This move, also used by Petrosian, is rather passive.

4. c3 ♜d7 5. a4 a5 6. f4?!

In my opinion the diagonal c1–h6 should be kept open for the bishop. I prefer the simple 6. ♗f3.

6...♗e7 7. ♗d2

I also dislike this move, since the knight has the excellent square a3. Thus 7. ♗f3 should be played. But Kupreichik would like to deploy this knight on the kingside.

7...h5 8. ♗df3 ♖a6 9. ♖xa6 ♗xa6 10. ♖e3 ♗f5 11. ♖f2 ♖e7=

I assess this position as roughly equal, since Black has no weakness. His plan is simple: play g7–g6 and ♖f8–g7. In this situation White should become active on the queenside, but he has withdrawn his pieces from that sector.

12. ♖e2 h4 13. 0–0 0–0–0?

But this is going too far! Obviously we can understand Korchnoi's desire to play for a win against his young opponent (this was a training tournament for masters against grandmasters), but queenside castling is too risky. What's more, it seems that Korchnoi was unaware that he was up against an outstanding attacking player! As I mentioned earlier, the correct plan consisted of transferring the king to g7. Hence the move 12...h4 was also questionable.

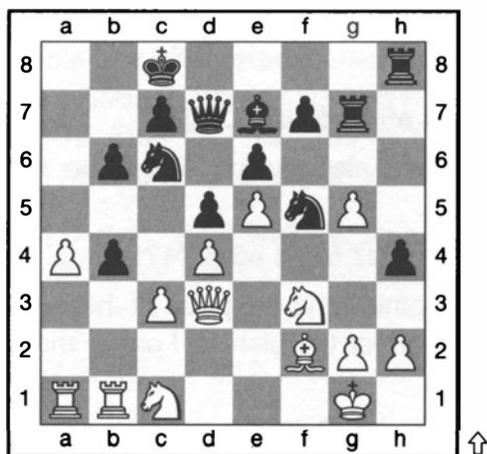

14. ♖d2 (14. b4!?) 14...♗dg8 15. ♗fb1 ♖b8 16. b4

Kupreichik is in his element!

16...♖c6 17. ♖c1 g5 18. fxg5 ♗g7

18...♖d8 19. bxa5 ♖xa5 20. ♖b3 ♗xg5 21. ♖d3±.

19. ♖d3 axb4

20. a5 ♖b8 21. axb6+- cxb6 22. ♗a6 ♖b7 23. ♗ba1 bxc3 24. ♖xc3 ♗b4 25. ♖d3 ♗a5 26. ♖b5 ♖b4 27. ♗1xa5

Black resigned. White conducted the attack brilliantly, giving his opponent no chance.

Game 11

I. Zaitsev – Pokojowczyk

Sochi 1976

I witnessed this game and I must say it made a great impression on me. I used the same system myself on various occasions but I never managed to win as convincingly as this.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6 5. ♖f3 ♖b6 6. a3 c4 7. ♖bd2 ♖a5 8. g3 ♗d7 9. ♗h3!?

Igor Zaitsev's move. It is directed against the ...f6 break. Another idea is to leave the g2 square free for the knight transfer ♖f3–h4–g2–e3.

9...f6?!

Black goes along with his opponent. Stronger was 9...0–0–0 10. 0–0 h6 11. ♖h4 g5 12. ♖g2 h5±.

10. exf6! gxf6 11. 0–0 0–0–0 12. ♗e1 ♗g7

Instead 12...♗e8 13. ♗b1 ♖c7 14. b3 cxb3 15. ♖xb3 ♖c4 (15...♗a4 16. ♗xe6+-) 16. ♗f4± was also insufficient for equality. Black could have considered 12...♖e7! to bring the knight into play.

13. ♗b1 ♖b8

14. b4!±

With this typical advance White begins to harvest his advantage.

14...cxb3 15. ♖xb3 ♖xb3

Or 15...♙a4 16. ♖×e6 ♙×b3 17. ♔e2 ♗c6
18. ♙f4+ ♗a8 19. ♗d2+-.

16. ♖×b3 ♙a4 17. ♖×b6 ♙×d1
18. ♖b×e6+- ♙×f3 19. ♙f4+ ♗a8
20. ♙c7 ♗h6 21. ♙×d8 ♖×d8 22. ♖e8

Black resigned.

I recommend that anyone who wishes to learn to play the 3. e5 system for White should make a detailed study of the games of Kupreichik and Zaitsev! The endeavours of these two players were supplemented by those of Sveshnikov, Malaniuk, Romanishin, Sax and others. Yet for a long time Black did not take the move 3. e5 seriously, because it was not used by the elite. This situation persisted until the end of the 1980s, when I chalked up no less than ten victories with it against grandmasters. A systematic theory of 3. e5 began to be developed, and today it is no longer a simple variation but a complete system, one in which Black is finding ever more difficult problems in obtaining an equal game.

As we discussed earlier, in recent years Black has been safely solving his problems against 3. ♗d2?! with 3...c5, while after 3. ♗c3! White has to be prepared to face long forcing variations arising after 3...♙b4 4. e5 c5, 3...♗f6 or 3...d×e4!?. And although White can retain the advantage in all these lines, it is not so easy to convert this into a win. This is perhaps the reason why in recent years the move 3. e5 has grown sharply in popularity among the chess elite as well as among amateur players. In this line Black has fewer possibilities for counterplay.

These are the most important plans for Black:

- 1) Exchange of the light-squared bishops by 3...b6 or 3...♗e7 and 4...b6, or by the manoeuvre 3...c5, 4...♔b6, 5...♙d7 followed by ♙b5.
- 2) Counter-attack on the d4 pawn by c5, ♔b6, ♗c6, followed by ♗ge7-f5 or ♗h6-f5.
- 3) Counter-attack on the white centre by 3...c5 4. c3 ♗c6 5. ♗f3 f6!?.

4) The flexible system (according to Botvinnik) 3...c5 4. c3 ♗c6 5. ♗f3 ♙d7!? 6. ♙e2, and then

a) 6...♗ge7 (or even 6...♖c8) followed by ♗f5 or ♗g6. Or

b) 6...f6!? attacking the e5 pawn.

But after 5...♙d7!? Black must also be prepared for 6. d×c5?!, 6. ♙e3!? (Paulsen, Kupreichik), 6. ♗a3 and especially 6. ♙e2!, after which he can gain nothing from an attack on the d4 pawn and must switch to an attack on e5 with f7-f6.

In any case the position after 3. e5 is objectively favourable for White – his advantage is not smaller than in the initial position.

According to my records, I have played the 3. e5 system in more than 150 (!) games as White, with a score of more than 70%. Among players of the young generation, Alexander Grischuk stands out as having scored a number of wins against grandmasters with 3. e5. Peter Svidler, Alexey Shirov and Alexander Motylev also play this system regularly and successfully.

For many years the chief expert on the black side was Wolfgang Uhlmann. Victor Korchnoi (who has also started playing this with White), Boris Gulko, Yuri Razuvaev, Artur Yusupov, Alexander Chernin, Mikhail Gurevich, Smbat Lputian, Igor Glek and Sergey Volkov have fought and continue to fight successfully against the 3. e5 variation. In ChessBase Lev Psakhis is the specialist commentator on this system.

Nowadays Black has considerable problems in this opening; hence I would recommend playing the Paulsen-Nimzowitsch-system 1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5!? as White, not only to those starting on their study of chess theory but also to experienced players. To anyone who studies this book carefully I promise an improvement in playing strength in this system of roughly 200 Elo points. I wish you great success!

Chapter 2

The plans for each side, linked to the pawn structure

As I have already remarked in the introduction, it is best to illustrate a new scheme with the help of a good selection of well annotated games. Just presenting a single game, won convincingly by using a particular scheme, can make an impression but is not completely convincing. It is only when you demonstrate two or three games played following the same standard pattern that young chess players begin to understand that there are certain laws which cannot be broken.

In contemporary chess it is very difficult to win a game simply by carrying out a single plan, even if it is implemented energetically and consistently. Usually you have to vary the ideas according to the countermeasures employed by the opponent. Hence the following list of plans for each side is offered with the caveat that it should only be thought of as a rough guide. The list consists of plans which, in this or that game, might have played an overwhelming role whilst other ideas remained in the background. Furthermore, the plans for each side are directly linked with pawn structure and piece activity.

Plans for White:

- 1) Attack on the king making use of the space advantage on the kingside and a lead in development.
- 2) Use of the space advantage to cramp the opponent as much as possible and to force a transition to an advantageous endgame.

- 3) Release of the tension in the centre (dxc5, exf6) followed by a blockade on the squares d4 and e5.
- 4) Exchange of dark-squared bishops, followed by exploitation of the weakened dark squares.
- 5) Play on both wings.
- 6) If Black forms a locked pawn chain with c5–c4 then White prepares to undermine it with b3 and c4 (after bxc4) and (or) carries out a typical piece sacrifice on c4, d5, f5, e6, or g6.

Counterplay for Black:

- 1) Pressure on the d4 pawn.
- 2) Exchange of light-squared bishops by means of ♟d7–b5 or ♞b6 and ♟a6 .
- 3) The undermining of the e5 pawn by means of f7–f6.
- 4) Attack on the queenside by b5, a5, b4 plus counterplay along the c-file.
- 5) Counterplay on the kingside linked to g7–g5 and pressure on the f-file (a rare plan).

To be able to present the material more conveniently we have divided the games into four large groups:

- 1) Attacking the king.
- 2) Advantage in space and (or) development, the sacrifice of a pawn for space, and standard endgames.
- 3) “For” and “against” the blockade, weakness of one or other colour complex.
- 4) Play on both wings.

As the author plays this system mainly with the white pieces and considers that it gives White the advantage, the division into themes is carried out mainly from the point of view of White's play. Black appears in the role merely of an opponent but his plans and counterplay are nevertheless examined in some depth. The heading of each game shows the idea, or ideas, which played a dominant role in the game.

2.1 Attack on the king

As a rule, the prerequisites for an attack are a lead in development and a space advantage. In our case, however, one other peculiarity of the position is present – the white pawn on e5. This pawn denies Black's pieces the use of the very important f6 square, which makes it more difficult for him to protect his king, especially if it takes up residence on the kingside. Alekhine was absolutely right when he noted that the white pawn on e5 is the signal for an attack on the enemy king. This is characteristic not just of the French with 3. e5, but also of the Sicilian with 2. c3, for instance, and of many other openings.

An attack by White on the queenside relies above all on having a lead in development. This plan, as we have already said, is one of the most important in White's arsenal.

In the first chapter we saw several nice attacks by White, in the games Greco–N.N., 1620 (game 1 on page 12), Paulsen–Schwarz, Leipzig 1879 (game 2 on page 13) and Kupreichik–Korchnoi, Sochi 1970 (game 10 on page 21). We shall now move on to some other examples.

Attack on the king

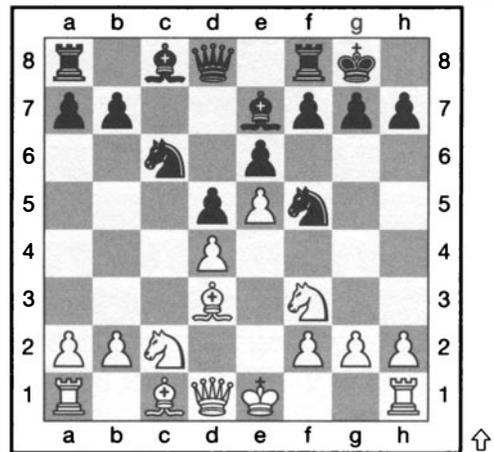

Game 12
Sveshnikov – Faragó
Hastings 1984/85

A model game, the theme of which is the attack on the king and play against the knight on f5.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♘c6
5. ♗f3 ♗ge7 6. ♗a3 cxd4 7. cxd4 ♗f5
8. ♘c2 ♙e7?

This is a mistake; correct is 8...♗b4
9. ♙d2±. Now my bishop arrives at d3 in a single move.

9. ♙d3 0–0

What are the prerequisites of White's attack? As usual, he has an advantage in space, but there is no lead in development. However, both white bishops are aiming at the enemy king and the f5 knight is not secure. After White's next move, play becomes forced.

10. g4! ♗h4

In the case of 10...♗h6 the simple capture 11. ♙xh6 is possible, as well as the preliminary 11. ♖g1!, after which the move f7–f5 is not possible, because after White captures on f6 all Black recaptures lose material. The knight is therefore stranded on h6.

11. ♖xh4 ♗xh4 12. g5!

Now it is the bishop that finds itself in an awkward situation. Black must capture the g5 pawn, which will involve opening the g-file and coming under a strong attack.

12... ♗xg5 13. ♖h5 h6 14. ♖g1 ♗xc1 15. ♖xc1 f5

Again the only move. If 15... ♖h8?!, then 16. ♗e2+–.

16. ♖xh6 ♖f7 17. ♗e2! ♖b6 18. ♖h4 ♗d7

18... ♖xb2?! loses to 19. ♗b1 ♖xa2 20. ♗a1 ♖b2 21. ♖gb1 ♖c3 22. ♗a3 ♖xd4+ 23. ♖xd4 ♖xd4 24. ♖xd4+–.

19. ♖g5 ♖xb2 20. ♗d2?!

An inaccuracy which nevertheless does not let Black off the hook. More precise is 20. ♗h5! ♖xd4+ 21. ♗d1!+– ♖ff8 22. ♖xd4+–.

20... ♖e7

20... ♖e7 21. ♖cg1+–.

21. ♗h5 ♖g6 22. ♖g3 ♖f8 23. ♖h3 ♖e7 24. ♗h8+ ♗f7 25. ♖g1 ♗a4 26. ♖h5+ g6 27. ♖xg6

Black resigned. In many variations the insecure position of the knight on f5 is the precondition for active play by White on the kingside.

Sveshnikov – Gulko

52nd USSR Championship, Riga 1985
It should be said that Boris Gulko was one of my main adversaries in the French Defence with 3. e5. It is true that this was in the 70s and early 80s, when I had only just begun to play this system. I should add that even today Boris Frantsevich is one of the main specialists in this variation for Black. He was one of the first to suggest interesting ways for Black to play, and more than one generation of chess players has learnt from his games. Nor must we forget the contribution towards the theory of this variation by his friend Boris Zlotnik, a master and distinguished trainer who, in the mid-80s, wrote an important theoretical article on the French with 3. e5.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6 5. ♖f3 ♗d7 6. ♗e2

Here 6. a3!? is interesting. The game Sveshnikov–Chernin, Riga 1985, continued 6... ♖c8 7. ♗d3 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♖b6 9. ♗c2 g5!? 10. h3 ♖xd4!? 11. ♖xd4 ♗c5 12. ♖e2 ♗xf2+ 13. ♗f1 f6 14. ♗a4 fxe5, and here 15. ♖bc3! (instead of 15. ♗xd7+?) would have cast doubt on the correctness of the piece sacrifice (exercise 59 on page 144).

6... ♖ge7 7. ♖a3 cxd4

In our previous meeting (Tashkent 1985) Gulko responded with 7... ♖g6 and after 8. h4 cxd4 9. cxd4 ♗b4+ 10. ♗f1 h6 11. h5 ♖f8 White had the better chances.

8. cxd4 ♖f5 9. 0–0!?

Here 9. ♖c2 ♖b4 10. ♖e3 ♖xe3 11. fxe3 ♗e7 12. a3 ♖c6 13. b4 a6 14. ♗b1 ♖a7 15. a4 ♖c6!? 16. ♗d2 a5 17. b5 ♖b4 leads to approximate equality.

9... ♖b6

Here 9... ♗xa3 10. bxa3 ♖b6 11. ♗e3 0–0 deserves attention. Saddling White with doubled pawns on the a-file might have enabled Black to show the downside of White's ninth move. This happened in the game Sveshnikov – Luther (Nova Gorica 2000) – see Volume 2, game 38 on page 33.

10. ♖c2 a5

Black takes control of the b4 square and seeks an exchange of light-squared bishops by means of the manoeuvre ♖a7, ♗b5. However, this involves a considerable loss of time and besides, on 11...♖a7 12. a4! is possible, preventing Black from carrying out his plan. Both 10...♗c8 11. g4 ♖fe7 and 10...♖a5 should be considered, e. g. 11. g4 [11. ♖e3 ♖xe3 (11...♖e7 12. b3 ♗b5 13. ♗a3±) 12. fxe3 ♗e7⇒] 11...♖e7 [11...♖h6 12. b4 ♖c4 (12...♗xb4 13. ♗b1+–) 13. ♗xh6 g×h6 14. ♗xc4 d×c4 15. ♖d2±; 12. ♗xh6 g×h6 13. b4 ♖c6 (13...♖c4±) 14. b5 ♖a5⇒] 12. ♖fe1 ♗b5 13. ♖d3 h5 14. g×h5 ♖f5 15. ♗e3 ♗c8 (15...♖c4 16. a4 ♖cxe3 17. fxe3 ♗c4 18. ♖f4∞, Sveshnikov – Dolmatov, Naberezhnye Chelny 1988) 16. b4 ♖c6 17. a4 ♗c4 18. ♗b1 ♗d8 19. ♖f4 ♗xe2 20. ♗xe2 ♗h4 21. h3 with complex play (Sveshnikov – Kiriakov, Elista 1994, Volume 2, game 52 on page 45).

11. g4 ♖fe7 12. ♖h4

Also possible was 12. ♖fe1, and on 12...h5 (after 12...♖g6 13. f4 ♗e7 14. ♗e3 White can, without losing time on 13. ♖g2, prepare the immediate f4–f5 advance) – 13. g×h5 ♖f5 14. ♗e3 and compared with the game Sveshnikov – Skalkotas (Athens 1983) instead of the useful 10...♗c8 Black has played 10...a5.

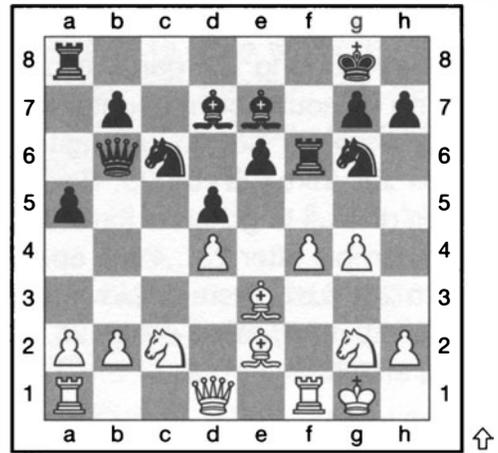

12...♖g6 13. ♖g2 ♗e7 14. f4 0–0 15. ♗e3 f5

There is no other defence against the threat of 16. f5.

16. e×f6

The game would have had a less forcing character after 16. h3, followed by ♗b1 and ♗d3.

16...♗×f6

17. h4

On this occasion White's attack was successful, but on examination of the following games, played by Gulko and myself, it becomes clear that White's position is not really so good.

17. ♗d3 ♗d6 18. h4 ♗af8 19. g5?! ♗f7 20. ♗xg6 h×g6 21. h5 g×h5 22. ♗×h5 g6! 23. ♗×g6+ ♗g7 24. ♗d3 ♖e7 25. ♗b3 ♗×b3 26. a×b3 b6, when Black has good compensation for the sacrificed pawn (Benjamin – Gulko, USA 1992).

17. ♗d3 ♗d6 18. h4 ♗f7 19. h5 ♖ge7 20. ♗e2 ♗af8 and Black has a good position. After 21. ♗ad1 g6 22. h6 ♖b4 23. ♖×b4 a×b4 24. b3 ♖c6 25. ♗f2 ♗f6 26. ♗d2 ♗c7 27. ♗df1 ♖a7 28. ♗c1 ♗b8 29. ♗e2 ♗e8 the game Sveshnikov – Mencinger (Finkenstein Open 1994) ended in a draw.

Thus White's attack should not be winning against correct play. However, this game very clearly demonstrates the method of attack. Of course theory continues to develop and I can now say that the variation with 12. ♖h4 with ♖g2 to follow is clearly insufficient for an advantage. Nevertheless White's method is very instructive.

17...♗d6 18. h5 ♖ge7 19. ♗d3 ♗c8 20. ♗e2 ♗f8

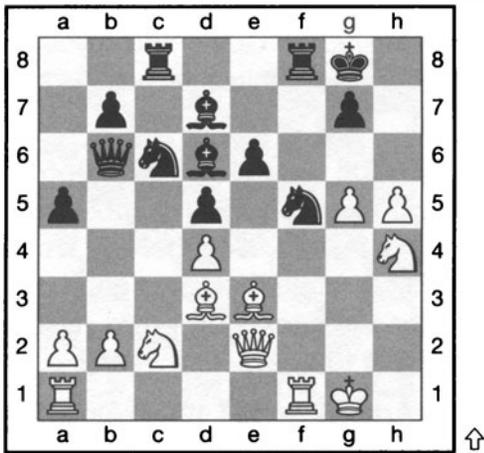

A useful move. Now the advance 21. g5 will not come with tempo.

21. ♖h4 h6

Black tries to bring the game to a crisis: he has no obvious active counterplay, and treading water is not to his taste. After 21...♖b4 22. ♖xb4 ♜xb4 23. ♖ad1 Black will find it difficult to generate threats against d4, for example after 23...♖c6, apart from the calm 24. ♖b1, there could also follow 24. ♖xh7+ ♖xh7 25. ♜d3+ ♖g8 26. h6 with a strong attack.

22. g5 hxg5

22...♖f5 is bad in view of 23. ♖xf5 exf5 24. gxh6 gxh6 25. ♜g2+.

23. fxg5 ♖f5!24. h6

Of course the prosaic 24. ♖xf5 exf5 is also possible, with somewhat better prospects, but the continuation in the game is very tempting.

24...♖ce7

The best move. It would be dangerous to take the piece, for instance: 24...♖xh4 25. ♜h5! g6 26. ♖xg6 ♖e7 (26...♖f5 27. ♖xf5 ♖xf5 28. ♖xf5 exf5 29. ♜g6 etc.) 27. ♖f7+ ♖h8 28. ♜xh4 ♖f5 29. ♜h5 with a strong attack.

25. ♜h5 ♖g3?

The decisive error. Also bad was 25...♖h2+ 26. ♖xh2 ♖xc2+ 27. ♖xc2 ♜c7+ 28. ♖g1 ♜g3+ 29. ♖g2 and 29...♖xe3 loses to 30. ♖h7+ mating. However, Black has at his disposal an interesting resource 25...♖g3!, the power of which White did not fully appreciate when he played 25. ♜h5. Black apparently rejected 25...♖g3 because of the variation 26. ♖xf8+ ♖xf8 27. ♖h7+ ♖xh7 28. hxg7+ ♖xh5 29. gxh8♜, but in fact he is not forced to capture the queen (with 28...♖xh5) and can instead play 28...♖xg7 with the better prospects. So in this variation White would have to respond with 27. ♜g4 or 27. ♜d1, after which a very sharp position would be reached offering chances for both sides.

The ensuing play is pretty forced.

26. g6! ♖xh4 27. hxg7 ♖xg7 28. ♜h7+ ♖f6 29. ♜xh4+ ♖g7

If 29...♖xg6, then 30. ♜xe7 threatening 31. ♖f2 and ♖g2.

30. ♜h7+ ♖f6 31. ♖h6

Black resigns. A nice finish is possible: 31...e5 32. ♜g7+ ♖e6 33. ♜xe5#.

After the game Mikhail Tal came up to me and said: "What a great attack on the h-file!" I shall remember the praise of that attacking genius for the rest of my days!

The next game shows the dangers that lie in wait for Black's king if he lags behind in development.

Attack on the king

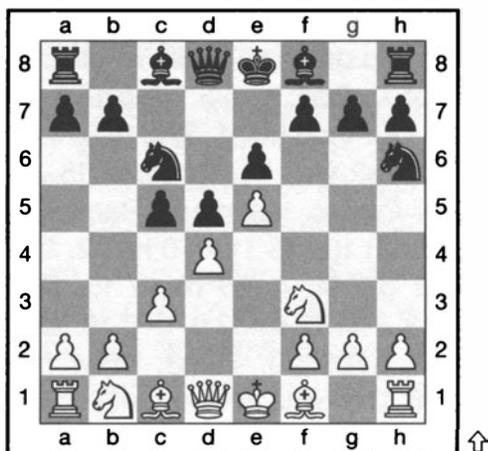

Game 14

Grischuk – Bareev

17th EU Cup, Panormo 2001

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6 5. ♖f3 ♖h6

(see next diagram)

In the event of White capturing on h6, Black is relying on being able to develop quickly with ♟g7 , 0–0 and f6, when his bishop pair and active piece play will be compensation for the defects in his kingside pawn structure.

6. ♟d3

Other options are:

6. dxc5 ♟xc5 7. b4 ♟b6 8. b5 ♗e7 9. ♟d3 ♗g4 10. 0–0 ♗g6 11. ♟xg6 fxg6 , Grischuk – Bareev, Cannes 2001 (Bareev won this game);

6... cxd4 7. ♟xh6 !?

After the exchange on d4 this move makes more sense, since it is easier for White to play for a lead in development: his knight can come to c3 and his rook to the c-file.

7. cxd4 ♗f5 8. ♟xf5 exf5 9. ♗c3 ♟e6 10. h4 h6 11. h5 ♟e7 12. ♗e2 ♗a5+ 13. ♗f1 ♞c8 14. ♗g1 ♗d7 15. ♗f4 ♞c7 16. ♞h3 ♞hc8 17. ♞g3 ♟f8 ♞, Khalifman – Akopian, Dortmund 2000.

10... ♞g8

The alternative plan of kingside castling would have been more expedient.

11. 0–0

11... ♗xe5 ?!

A very dubious decision: Black opens lines in the centre with his own king still on e8.

12. ♗xe5 ♟xb5 13. ♗h5 ♞g7

13...0–0–0 14. ♗xb5 ♗xb5 15. ♗xf7+- .

14. ♞fe1 ♞d8 ?

The computer also suggests this suicidal move at first, but quickly spots a decisive combination for White and gives instead the only defence 14...♔e7. But in that case White is still better, e.g. 15. ♖xh6 (15. ♖e3!? Golubev) 15...♗f8

A) 16. ♖ac1?! ♗g8 (16...♔g5 17. ♖g6+ hxg6 18. ♖xg5±) 17. ♖f3 (17. ♖xb5? ♔g5) 17...♔c6 18. ♖e2 ♖xb2±;

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6
5. ♖f3 ♖b6 6. a3 c4 7. ♖bd2 ♔d7?!

This allows the immediate break b2–b3, which favours White with his superior development. Black should be giving priority to developing his kingside, after first pausing to clamp down on White's active play by means of 7...♖a5, e.g. 8. g3 ♔d7 9. h4 ♖e7 10. ♔h3 (10. ♖g5 h6 11. ♖h3 0–0–0 12. ♖f4 ♗b8 13. ♔e2 ♖c7 14. ♗f1 ♖c8 15. ♔h5 g6 16. ♔e2 ♖b6±, Ivanchuk–Bareev, Monte Carlo 2003) 10...f5 11. 0–0 h6 12. ♖b1 ♖g8 13. ♔g2 g5 14. hxg5 hxg5 15. b3 cxb3 16. ♖xb3 ♔a4 17. ♖fd2 0–0–0 18. ♖c2 ♖c6 19. ♖d1 ♔xb3 20. ♖xb3. A novelty: White opens a route for his queen to the kingside, hinders ...♖f5 and clears the way for an advance of his f-pawn. Another good move is 14. ♖e2!?, when Black has serious problems in developing his kingside pieces, e.g. 14...♖c8, and now:

Attack on the king

Game 16

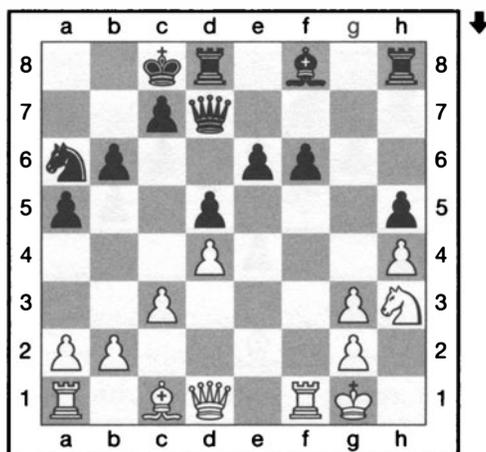

Kupreichik – Vaganian
Russian Cup, Kiev 1984

Fearing an attack on the kingside, Black often castles on the queenside. But even then White, with his space advantage and lead in development, can give the black king a hard time. Black's counter-attack on the kingside usually comes too late.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 ♗e7 4. ♗f3 b6
5. c3 ♖d7 6. ♗bd2 a5 7. h4

Revealing quite clearly his aggressive intentions on the kingside.

The symmetry of the two knights on opposite edges of the board is striking. But the white knight has various interesting routes back into the fray, whilst its opposite number will be stuck out of play for some considerable time.

15...e5!?

Black sacrifices a pawn to open lines on the kingside and activate his bishop. Instead 15...♗g7 would be passive, e. g. 16. ♖f4 ♖b7 17. ♖xh5±.

16. ♖xf6 ♗g7 17. ♖f3 (17. ♗g5!?)

22. a3 ♖c6 23. b4

A tempting pawn sacrifice. Besides, if this is not played it is difficult to see how else White can make progress.

23...axb4 24. axb424...♖a7

Perhaps Black was wrong to decline the sacrifice. On 24...♖xb4 Kupreichik gave this variation: 25. ♖ca3 ♖c6 26. ♖a6!?! ♖a5 27. ♖6xa5 bxa5 28. ♖b3+ ♖c8 29. ♖xa5 ♖c6 30. ♖xd5 ♖. We frequently find that different plans complement one another and indeed flow from one to the next. For example, if we have a kingside attack and the opponent suddenly weakens his dark squares, then we would be justified in choosing a different target.

Attack on the king, play on the dark squares

Game 18

Motylev – Rustemov

57th Russian Championship
(Qualifier), Tomsk 2004

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 ♙d7!?

A rare move which has never been used at the highest level. However, the idea is a typical one in the closed positions of the French Defence. Black wants to exchange his light-squared bishop. He plans to play a7–a6, so that if White exchanges bishops on b5 the a-file will be open for the black rook.

4. c3

White does not react to his opponent's move, contenting himself with strengthening his centre and developing his pieces. Of course a more active plan is also possible, for instance 4. $\text{d}3$!? a6 5. $\text{g}5$ $\text{e}7$! (as opposed to 5... $\text{c}8$?, see Bronstein – Kärner, Tallinn 1981, Volume 2, game 21 on page 23) 6. $\text{d}3$ (6. $\text{c}3$ ±) 6...c5 (6... $\text{b}5$ 7. $\text{b}5$ + axb5 8. $\text{d}3$ ±) 7. dxc5 $\text{bc}6$ 8. 0–0 h6 9. $\text{e}3$ $\text{c}7$ 10. c3±.

4...a6 5. $\text{d}2$ $\text{b}5$ 6. $\text{b}5$ + axb5

Black has achieved his first objective – the bishops have been exchanged and the a-file opened. But what now?. The advance c7–c5 is difficult to implement, since in that case both b-pawns would be weak. Meanwhile White has the advantage in space and force on the kingside.

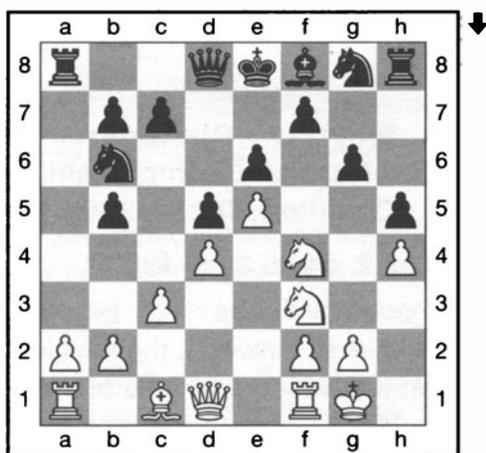

7. $\text{e}2$

A characteristic manoeuvre: the knight heads for h5 via f4 or g3.

7... $\text{d}7$ 8.0–0 h5?!

A controversial decision. Black seizes a bit of space and secures a base for his knight at f5 but at the cost of weakening the dark squares and more or less renouncing kingside castling.

9. $\text{f}4$ g6 10. $\text{f}3$ $\text{b}6$ 11. h4!?

White fixes the kingside and prepares to post his bishop to g5. 11. $\text{d}3$!?± would also have been good.

11... $\text{h}6$ 12. $\text{d}3$ $\text{f}5$ 13. g3 $\text{e}7$?!

It is hard to see how else Black could complete his development. But now White can exchange the bishops and obtain comfortable bases for his knights at f4 and g5. So 13... $\text{d}7$ 14. $\text{g}5$ $\text{g}7$ ± would have been better.

14. $\text{g}5$ $\text{a}7$ 15. $\text{c}1$ $\text{f}8$

Black castles artificially, leaving the rook on h8 to defend against the possible breaks with g3–g4 and h4–h5.

16. $\text{g}2$ $\text{g}7$ 17. $\text{h}1$ $\text{c}4$ 18. $\text{f}4$ $\text{a}8$ 19. a3 b6 20. $\text{ae}1$ $\text{c}8$

Everything is ready for White to begin his attack.

21. g4! hxg4

21... $\text{h}6$?! seems dubious in view of 22. gxh5 (or 22. $\text{f}6$ + $\text{f}6$ 23. exf6+ $\text{f}8$ 24. g5±) 22...gxh5 23. $\text{e}g1$ ±.

22. $\text{c}xg4$ $\text{f}8$ 23. b3!?

White wants to involve the d3 knight in the attack, but is reluctant to let the b2 pawn go, after which the a3 pawn might be lost and there would also be problems with the c3 pawn. But White is quite willing to let just the a3 pawn go as fodder for the horse, since the knight would take a good while to get back into play from a3.

23... $\text{a}5$

In the hope than the return journey from b3 will be a bit shorter.

24. $\text{f}4$ $\text{g}8$

24... $\text{b}3$?! 25. h5 gxh5 26. $\text{h}5$ $\text{g}8$ 27. $\text{eh}1$ $\text{e}8$ 28. $\text{h}7$! $\text{g}5$ 29. $\text{h}5$!+–.

25. $\text{f}6$!

White is willing to sacrifice another pawn to open the e-file and exploit the e5 square.

25... $\text{b}3$

25... $\text{f}6$ 26. exf6 $\text{c}x$ f6 27. $\text{g}5$ with the unpleasant threats of $\text{h}7$ + and $\text{e}6$ +.

26. $\text{g}5$ $\text{e}8$

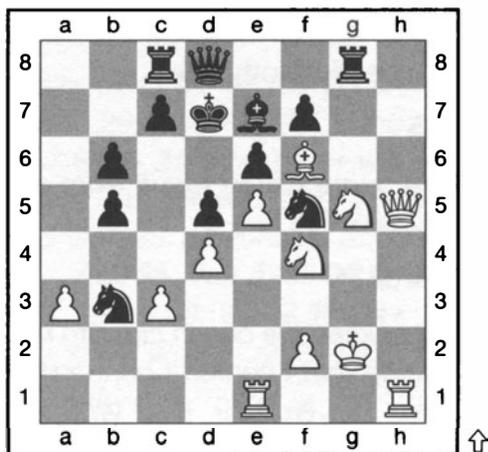

The only move, since 26...♖d7 27. h5 ♘h6
28. ♗d1 +- loses.

27. h5 g×h5

27...♙xf6 28. exf6 ♔d7 (28...♗xf6

31. ♖xg7 ♗xg7 32. g×f7+-.

28. ♗xh5 ♔d7

The king tries to escape.

29. ♘d5!

This nice shot forces Black into an unfavourable endgame and is stronger than 29. ♗xf7 ♖xg5+ 30. ♙xg5 ♗g8±.

30...exd5 30. ♗xf7 ♖xg5+ 31. ♙xg5 ♗c6

Now 31...♗g8 32. ♗xf5+ would be pointless.

32. ♙xe7 ♘xe7

32...♗g8+!? would have been a better try:
33. ♗xg8 ♖xg8+ 34. ♙g5 ♖xg5+ 35. ♔f3±.

33. ♖h7

Or 33. ♗f6+!? ♔d7 (33...♔b7 34. ♖h7±)
34. ♖e3±.

33...♗g8+ 34. ♖g7

34...♗xf7 35. ♖xf7 ♖g8+ 36. ♔f3 ♘g6

Formally speaking, Black even has a slight material advantage: two knights for a rook and pawn. But the black pieces are completely lacking in coordination, the b3 knight is out of the game and the white passed pawns are charging down the board. Thus the black position can hardly be salvaged. The best chance lay in 36...♔d7 37. ♖h1 ♘d2+ 38. ♔e3 ♘e4 39. ♖hh7 ♖e8 40. f4 ♔e6 41. ♔d3 c5 42. ♖fg7±.

37. ♖h1 (37. ♔e2!?±) 37...♘d2+ 38. ♔e2 ♘e4 39. ♖hh7

42. axb4±.

40. ♖h6+- ♖g8 41. f3 ♘xc3+ 42. ♔d3 ♘b1

The fate of this knight has been an unfortunate one.

43. ♖f6+ ♔b7 44. ♖hxg6 ♖e8 45. ♖g7 ♘xa3 46. ♖ff7 ♖c8 47. e6

Game 19

Sveshnikov – Rublevsky

Russian Championship, Elista 1994

Comments by Sergey Rublevsky are in italics.

1. e4 c5 2. c3 e6 4. d4 d5 4. e5

It wasn't easy for me to decide to enter this line for the first time in my life and, in doing so, take on Sveshnikov in "his" variation of the French. But it seemed to me that the black position was solid and safe enough. After playing and analysing this game I began to understand that things were not so simple.

4...♘c6 5. ♘f3 ♙d7 6. ♙e2 ♘ge7 7. ♘a3 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♘f5 9. ♘c2 ♘b4 10. 0-0 ♘xc2 11. ♗xc2 ♗b6 12. ♗d3 ♖c8 13. a4!

At the time I knew only the game Sveshnikov–Dreev (Rostov on Don 1993), on which I was basing my play: 13. ♙d2 ♙b4! 14. ♙f4 a6 15. a4 ♖e7 16. h4 ♗a5 17. ♖fc1 ♗xc1+ 18. ♗xc1 h6, Draw. In my opinion the immediate 13. h4!? is stronger, not giving up any queenside squares to Black.

The move in the game is stronger than 13. ♗d2. With this variation I have played two other theoretically important games – against Brumen (Bled 2000, Volume 2, game 56 on page 48) and Dizdar (Bled 2002, Volume 2, game 57 on page 49).

13...♗b4 14. h4

Play on both wings. White has defended against an exchange of bishops by ♗b5 and he now launches an offensive against Black's kingside.

14...h6!?

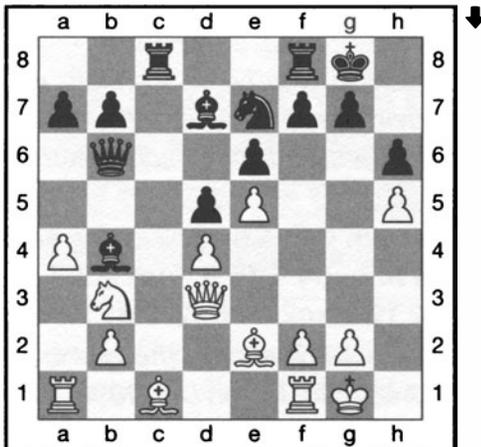

This is more accurate than 14...♖e7, when White would have the possibility of becoming immediately active on the kingside with 15. ♖e3!?

Also 14...h5 is worth considering, after which it would be very difficult to dislodge the knight from f5. Probably I would have played 15. ♗g5 with the idea of ♖ad1, ♖h2 and g4, which would have led to a sharp and uncompromising struggle.

15. h5 ♖e7 16. ♗d2

As soon as Black has released the pressure on d4, White transfers his knight to the queenside. But the main point is to open a route for the queen across to the kingside, after which it will be obvious that the g7 pawn is weak.

16...0–0 17. ♖b3

Black is compelled to close the kingside, since otherwise White will begin an attack against the black king: 17...♖c6? 18. ♗xh6! gxh6 19. ♖g3+ ♖h8 20. ♖f4 ♖e7 21. ♖xh6+ ♖g8 22. g4, or 17...f6? 18. ♗f4 with the idea 18...fxe5 19. ♗xe5 ♖c6 20. ♗xg7 ♖xg7 21. ♖g6+ ♖h8 22. ♖xh6+ ♖g8 23. ♖g6+ ♖h8 24. ♗d3.

Black could also have played 17...a5 18. g4!? with chances for both sides.

18. a5

An equal game would result from 18. exf6 ♗xf6 19. ♗e3 ♖f5.

18...♖d8!?

I wanted to keep the queen close to the kingside, seeing that I couldn't penetrate down the c-file: 18...♖c7 19. ♖g3 ♖h8 20. ♖d1 with the idea of 20...♖c2 21. ♗d2!.

19. ♗d2

The exchange of bishops highlights the weakness of the dark squares in the enemy camp.

19...♗xd2 20. ♖xd2 b6

Restricting the b3 knight.

21. axb6 axb6 22. ♖b4

The queen is looking for a way into the black camp. After 22. f4 ♖c6 that would be impossible and Black would have counterplay.

An interesting move, but I think playing on the queenside was not the right plan. After 22. f4 ♖c6 23. ♖a3± White's advantage is obvious.

22...f4 23. ♖fc1 ♗xc1+ 24. ♗xc1 ♖c6 25. ♖d2

25. ♖d6 f3! 26. ♗xf3 ♖xf3 leads to either perpetual check – 27. gx f3 ♖xd4! 28. ♖xd4 ♖g5+ 29. ♖h2 ♖xh5+, or an equal endgame: 27. ♗xc6 ♖xb3 28. ♖c7 ♖xb2 29. g3 ♖f8

30. ♖xf8+ ♜xf8 31. ♝xd7 ♜b4 32. ♝d6 ♜e7
33. f4.

25...♖g5 26. ♜c3 ♜e7

Better than the immediate attack on the h5 pawn: 26... ♜e8?! 27. ♖d3 ♜e7 28. ♖h3 ♜f5 29. ♜g4 ♜a4 30. ♜xf5 ♝xf5 31. ♜d2!, since after its capture the black pieces are tied up: 31. ... ♖xh5 32. ♖xh5 ♝xh5 33. ♜c8+ ♜h7 34. ♝b8.

27. ♜c7 ♜e8 28. ♖b4 ♜f5

Black fails to solve all his problems with 28... ♜xh5 29. ♖xe7 (29. ♜xh5?! ♖xh5 30. ♖xe7 ♖d1+ 31. ♜h2 ♖h5+ with a draw) 29... ♜xe2 30. ♖xe6+ ♜h7 31. ♖xd5 f3 32. ♖e4+ ♜h8 33. g4 ♜a6 34. ♝a7 (34. ♜c3? ♝f4!) 34... ♜c4 35. ♝a8 ♝xa8 36. ♖xa8+ ♜h7 37. ♖xf3 ♜xb3 38. ♖xb3 ♖xg4+ 39. ♜f1 ♖xd4 40. ♖c2+ ♜g8 41. e6 ♜f8 42. ♖f5+ ♖f6 43. ♖d5, and Black will still have to work hard to draw.

After 28...f3 29. ♜xf3 ♝xf3 30. ♖xe7 ♖xe7 31. ♝xe7 ♝xb3 32. ♝xe8+ ♜f7 33. ♝b8 ♝xb2 33. f4± White would have found it hard to win the endgame.

29. ♖xb6 ♜xh5 30. ♖xe6+ ♜h7

The other king move was clearly weaker: 30... ♜h8? 31. ♜c8 ♝xc8 32. ♖xc8+ ♜h7 33. ♜d3 ♜g6 34. ♖e6.

31. ♜xh5 ♖xh5 32. ♜c3

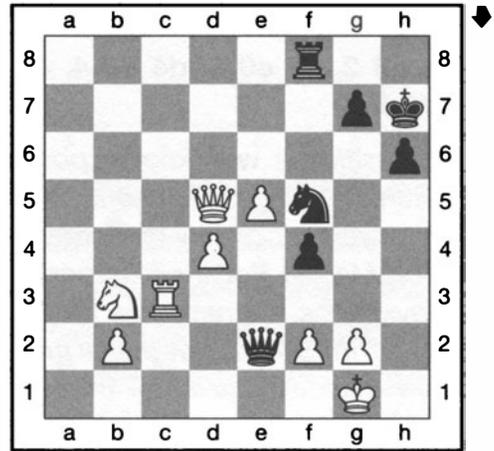

The other defensive try would fail: 32. ♜d2?? ♜g3! 33. f×g3 f×g3 34. ♜f3 ♝xf3, and now 35. ♖h3 loses to 35... ♝f1+ 36. ♜xf1 ♖d1#.

32...♖e2!?

Black has a slightly inferior endgame after 32... ♜xd4?! 33. ♜xd4 ♖d1+ 34. ♜h2 ♖xd4 35. f3, but 32... ♜e3! was stronger, and White has to give perpetual check by 33. fxe3 f3! 34. ♜c2! f2+ 35. ♝xf2 ♖d1+ 36. ♜h2 ♝xf2 37. ♖xd5 ♝f1 38. ♖e4+ ♜h8 39. ♖a8+ since 33. ♜c1? fails to 33... ♜g4 34. ♖xd5 f3.

33. ♖xd5

(see next diagram)

33...♜g3!

An excellent tactical resource, taking advantage of the weak white king. If Black tries 33... ♖e1+? 34. ♜h2 ♖xf2 instead then he falls under an attack with 35. ♖e4! e.g. 35... ♖xb2 36. ♜c8! ♝f7 37. e6 ♖xb3 38. exf7 ♖xf7 39. ♖d3.

34. f×g3

After 34. ♜c1? ♖h5! 35. f3 ♝b8! (but not 35... ♜e2+ 36. ♜f2 ♜xc1 37. ♖e4+ ♜h8 38. ♜xc1, and White is better) 36. ♜f2 ♖h4 only Black can play for a win.

34...f×g3 35. ♝xg3 ♝f1+ 36. ♜h2 ♖e1
37. ♝xg7+

This leads immediately to perpetual check. A king march behind enemy lines achieves nothing: 37. ♜h3 ♝h1+ 38. ♜g4 h5+ 39. ♜f5! (39. ♜f4? ♝h4+ 40. ♜f3 ♖f1+ 41. ♜e3 ♖f4+) 39... ♖xg3 40. ♜e6 ♝h2 41. ♜d7 ♝xg2 42. e6 ♖g4 43. ♜d8 ♝e2 44. ♜c5 ♝d2 45. ♜e4 ♝e2 46. ♜c5 ♝d2, and now certainly not 47. e7?? because of 47... ♝xd4 48. ♖xd4 ♖xd4+ 49. ♜d7 ♖h4!.

37...♜xg7 38. ♖d7+ ♜g6 39. ♖e8+ ♜g7
40. ♖d7+ ♜g6 41. ♖g4+ ♜h7 42. ♖d7+ ♜h8

Draw.

Game 20

Sveshnikov – Balashov

44th USSR Championship, Moscow 1976

Comments by Yuri Balashov are in italics.

1. e4 c5 2. c3 e6 3. d4 d5 4. e5 ♖c6
5. ♜f3 ♗d7

By transposition a well known position in the French Defence has arisen. The move 5...♗d7, recommended by the former World Champion Mikhail Botvinnik, is considered these days to be the main line for Black in this position. In 1976, however, this move was practically unknown and it took my opponent by surprise.

Of course, Botvinnik's authority is widely respected, yet I would not say that 5...♗d7 is the strongest move in this position. 5...♞b6 is certainly not weaker. The advantage of 5...♗d7 is its flexibility, yet in no way does it solve all of Black's problems.

When this game was played, I had only just taken up the 3. e5 system and I did not handle the opening in the best manner. My opponent showed the good possibilities for counterplay available to Black.

6. dxc5

A dubious move. The f8 bishop immediately reaches a good position. White's best continuation here is 6. ♗e2.

The main move here is 6. ♗e2.

6...♗xc5 7. ♗d3

Of course the most logical move here is 7. b4 which I played subsequently:

7. b4 ♗b6 8. b5 (to ease Black's pressure on the e5 pawn) 8...♗a5 9. ♗d3

9...♞c7 10. ♞e2 ♗e7 11. 0-0 ♗g6 12. ♞e1 0-0-0 13. ♗a3 ♜b8 14. ♗d2 f6 15. ♗xg6 hxg6 16. ♗f4 ♗c5 17. ♗c2 ♗c4 18. a4 ♞hf8 19. ♗g3 f5 20. ♗f4 ♞a5 21. ♞ec1 ±, Sveshnikov-Shabalov, Riga 1990 (see also exercise 45 on page 141, solution page 152).

The following game was the last word concerning this variation: 9...♞c7 10. ♞e2 ♗c4 11. a4 a6 12. bxa6 ♞xa6 13. 0-0 ♗e7 14. ♗a3 ♞xa4 15. ♗xc4 dxc4 16. ♞xa4 ♗xa4 17. ♗xc4 0-0 18. ♗d3 ♗g6 19. h4 ♗c6 20. h5 ♗xf3 21. gx f3 ♞xe5 22. hxg6 ♞g3+ 23. ♜h1 ♞h3+. Draw. Sveshnikov-Kharlov, Böblingen 1992.

7...♗ge7

7...f6 8. b4 ♗e7 9. b5 ♗xe5 10. ♗xe5 fxe5 11. ♞h5+ ♜f8 12. ♞xe5 ♗f6 13. ♞d6+ ♗e7 14. 0-0 e5 15. ♗a3 ♜f7 16. ♗d2 ♞e8 with a complicated game, Sveshnikov-Savon, Zonal Tournament, Lvov 1978.

8. 0-0

Grandmaster Sveshnikov is famous for steadfastly sticking to his principles in defending his own opening lines. A year and a half after this game he tried to strengthen White's play by 8. b4 ♗b6 9. b5, but after 9...♗a5 10. 0-0 ♞c8 11. a4 ♗g6 12. ♗a3 ♗c5 13. ♗xc5 ♞xc5 14. g3 ♞c7 Black had the better chances (Sveshnikov-Balashov, Zonal Tournament, Lvov 1978).

In my opinion, White's chances are not worse in the final position of this variation; the computer agrees with me.

8...♗g6 9. ♞e1 ♞c7

White has played the opening inaccurately and allowed Black to seize the initiative.

10. ♗xg6?!

If 10. ♞e2 0-0, followed by f7-f6, and Black obtains a satisfactory game.

Of course White should not have given up his bishop, after which he has problems. 10. ♞e2 = was better.

10...fxg6!

This capture is much stronger than 10...hxg6. Now Black has excellent prospects on the kingside thanks to the half-open f-file.

The normal move here is 10...hxg6, after which Black stands a little better. 10...fxg6 is interesting but questionable. I must admit that in 1976 I didn't suspect that Black could be planning h6, g5 and ♙e8 – for me this was a real revelation. Today of course I would try to prevent its execution, but at that time I did not fear it – because I didn't know it existed!

11. ♙f4?

White does not sense the danger he is in. He fortifies his e5 pawn by transferring the bishop to g3, but this manoeuvre is ineffective. On g3 the bishop will just be a spectator for the rest of the game. It was necessary to offer an exchange of dark-squared bishops by 11. ♙e3 , which corresponds to the needs of the position. White could also consider sharpening the game with 11. c4.

An unnecessary and dubious move. Instead 11. ♞bd2 was better, with an unclear position.

11...0–0 12. ♙g3 ♞e7

Black has a stable advantage now.

13. ♞bd2 ♞f5 14. ♞b3

After this further error Black is able to activate the d7 bishop.

14... ♙a4

A very interesting move, but 14... ♞ac8 was also good.

15. ♞h1?

An obvious error. I was stuck for a move. After 15. ♞d3 it was still a game.

15... $\text{♞b6 ♜ 16. ♞c2 ♞ac8 17. ♞e2 h6 18. h3 g5}$

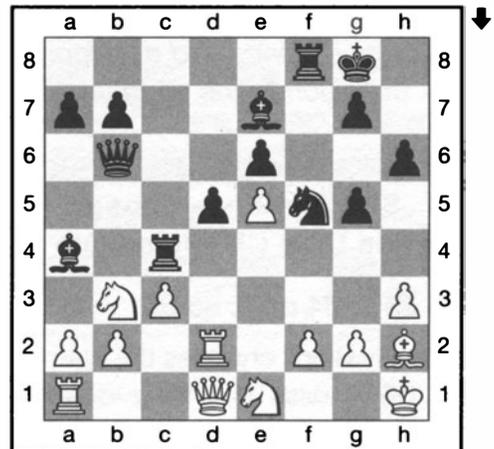

Black's initiative is growing, and it is hard to see what White can do about it.

19. $\text{♙h2 ♞c7 20. ♞e1 ♙e7}$

The threat is 21... ♞d4 . Whilst White is obliged to deal with tactical threats, Black improves the position of his pieces.

21. ♞d1 ♞c4 22. ♞d2

The time for decisive action has arrived!

22... $\text{g4! 23. hxg4 ♞e3 24. ♞e2}$

The knight is taboo because of 24. fxe3 ♞f1+ 25. ♙g1 ♞xe3.

24... ♞xg4 25. f3

Or 25. ♙g1 ♞e4 26. f3 ♞xe2 27. ♙xb6 ♞xd2 28. ♞xd2 axb6 29. fxg4 ♞f4.

25... ♞xh2 26. ♞d4

If 26. ♞xh2 ♞h4+ and the white king is in peril.

26... $\text{♙c5 27. ♞xh2 ♙xd4 28. cxd4 ♞xd4 29. ♞c1}$

White's main problem is not so much being a pawn down as having a weak king. Here he should have sought exchanges with 29. ♞f2.

29... ♞h4+ 30. ♞g3 ♙b5!

The decisive manoeuvre.

31. $\text{♞f2 ♞d8 32. ♞e3 d4 33. ♞cd1 ♞hf4 34. ♞xf4 ♞xf4 35. ♞xf4 ♞g5+}$

Advantage in space and development, transition to the endgame

Game 21

Sveshnikov – Grosar

Slovenian Club Championship 2003

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5

Occasionally Black chooses the plan 3...♗e7 4. ♗f3 b6 – with the idea of exchanging the light-squared bishops [Kupreichik–Vaganian, Russian Cup, Kiev 1984 (game 16 on page 32); Sveshnikov–Vaganian, Moscow 1985 (game 42 on page 82); Grosar–Zugaj, Ljubljana 1992; Moiseenko–Erashchenko, Togliatti 2000].

4. c3

A reliable move; you rarely see 4. ♖g4?! (Sveshnikov–Komarov, Vrnjačka Banja 1999, game 28 on page 57), but 4. ♗f3!? ♗c6 5. ♗d3∞ deserves attention.

4...♖b6

There is another interesting plan connected with the exchange of light-squared bishops: 4...♗d7 5. ♗f3 a6!? 6. ♗bd2± (Sveshnikov–Dražić, Ljubljana 1997).

5. ♗f3 ♗d7

The alternative is 5...♗c6.

6. a3!?

At one time 6. ♗e2 ♗b5 7. 0–0 ♗xe2 8. ♖xe2 ♖a6 9. ♖d1 (or 9. ♖xa6 ♗xa6; 9. ♖e3) was played, but Black easily solved his opening problems. Then Igor Zaitsev came up with a sharper plan for White, based on the pawn sacrifice 7. c4!?. You can study this variation by looking at Zaitsev's games with it. Three critical positions in this line should be noted:

1) 7...♗xc4 8. ♗xc4 dxc4 9. d5 exd5 10. ♖xd5;

2) 7...♗xc4 8. ♗xc4 ♖b4+ 9. ♗bd2 dxc4 10. a3 ♖b5;

3) 7...dxc4 8. d5 exd5 9. ♖xd5 ♗e7 10. ♖e4 ♖g6!

6...♗b5!?

Black has one other possibility to fight for equality: 6...♗c6 7. b4 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♖c8 with two variations: 9. ♗e3 (Sveshnikov–Piskov, Bled 1990, Volume 2, game 50 on page 42) and 9. ♗b2 (Sveshnikov–Nevednichy, Bled 1991, game 43 on page 84). 9. ♗e2? is insufficient because of 9...a5! 10. b5 ♗xd4! 11. ♗xd4 ♖xc1! 12. ♖xc1 ♖xd4 and now 13. ♖c7! (weaker for White is 13. ♖c3! ♗c5, Sveshnikov–Hoàng, Cheliabinsk 1990) 13...♖xa1 14. ♖b8+ with perpetual check; however, Black can carry on the fight with 13...♗c5 14. ♖a2! ♖xf2+ 15. ♗d1 ♖e3=.

7. b4 cxd4

Here 7...♗xf1 would be bad because of 8. bxc5±, but 7...cxb4 is playable, transposing, since 8. ♗xb5+ ♖xb5 9. axb4 ♗d7 10. ♖a5 ♖c4= 11. ♗fd2 (11. ♖a4 a6) 11...♖d3 12. ♖f3 ♖xf3 13. ♗xf3= is not dangerous for Black.

8. ♗xb5+

White achieves nothing with 8. ♖xd4 ♖a6 9. ♗xb5+ ♖xb5 10. a4 ♖d7=.

8...♖xb5 9. cxd4

9. ♗xd4 ♖d7 10. ♗d2 ♖c7 11. ♗f3 ♖xc3+ 12. ♗d2 ♖d3 13. ♖a4+ ♗d7 14. ♖c1 a6 15. ♖c3 ♖e4+ 16. ♗e3 ♖b1+ 17. ♗c1 ♖e4+ 18. ♗e3 ♖b1+=.

9...♗d7

9...a5! 10. bxa5 ♗c6 11. ♗c3 ♖c4 12. ♗e2 ♖xa5=.

10. ♗c3 ♖c6

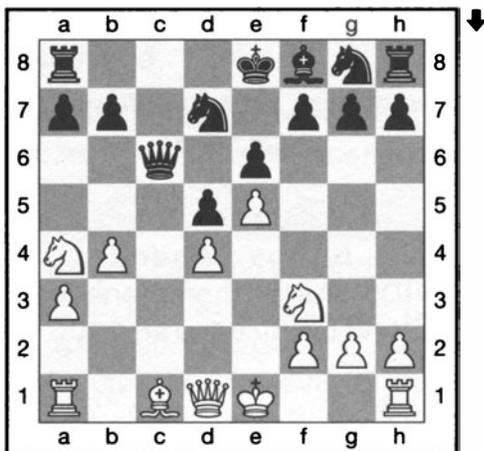

Inadequate for equality is 10...♖c4 11. ♗e2 a5 12. bxa5 ♖xa5 13. ♗d2 ♖a8 14. 0–0 ♗e7

15. ♖b1± (Alavkin – Driamin, Russian Cup, Tula 1999).

11. ♖a4!?

Here 11. ♕d2 ♖b6 12. 0–0 ♗c4 or 11. ♕b2 ♖b6 12. ♗d2 is interesting, but I didn't want to allow the black knight to settle on c4.

11...a5!?

12. ♕d2 axb4 13. axb4

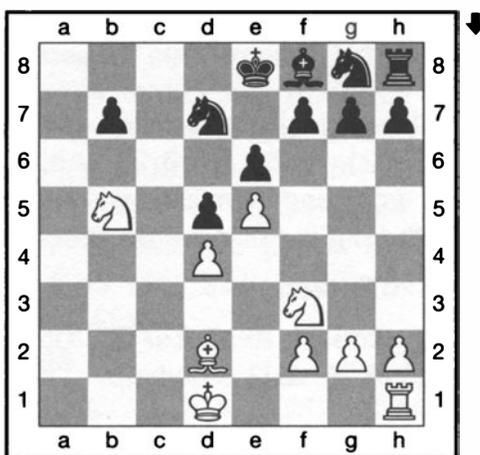

Here 13. ♖c1? is unfavourable because of 13...♙a6! 14. ♙b3 b6.

13...♙a6 14. b5!? (14. ♖a2!?) 14...♙xb5
15. ♗c3 ♖xa1 16. ♗xb5

After 16. ♙xa1 ♙a6 Fritz assesses the position as slightly better for Black.

16...♖xd1+ 17. ♗xd1

(see next diagram)

The critical position of the variation 11. ♖a4 a5!?: White has a marked initiative for the sacrificed pawn, certainly enough to reach a draw at least, but is it sufficient to win?

17...♖b8?!

In my opinion the natural 17...♖b6 18. ♗e2 ♗c4! would have given Black good counterplay.

18. ♗e2 ♗d7

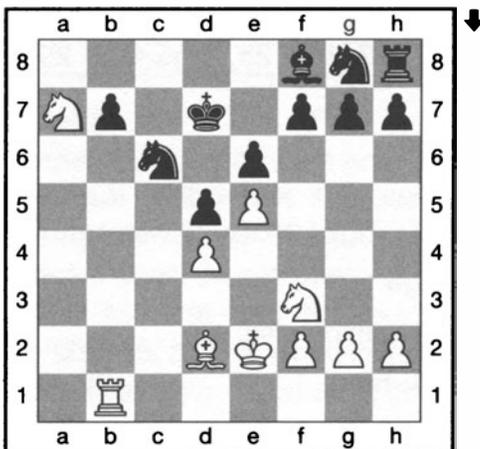

18. ♗c6 19. ♖b1± (19. ♖a1!?).

19. ♖b1!

The rook belongs precisely on this file!

19...♗c6 20. ♗a7!?

Pretty, but more convincing was 20. ♗d6! ♕xd6 21. exd6 ♗c8 (21...f6 22. ♖xb7+ ♗xd6 23. ♕c1! e5 24. dxe5+) 22. d7+!? ♗xd7 23. ♖xb7+ ♗e8 24. ♖b6 ♗ge7 25. ♗e5, or 23...♗c8 24. ♖xf7±.

20... ♖xa7?

The decisive error.

Good drawing chances were offered by 20... ♖c7! 21. ♖xc6 bxc6 22. ♗a5+ ♖c8 23. ♖b6 ♖c7!, and there is no way that White can profit from the discovered check.

21. ♖xb7+ ♖e8

Here 21... ♖c6 22. ♖xa7 ♗e7 23. ♖g5 ♗xg5 24. ♗xg5 f6 25. ♗d2 is no help.

22. ♖b8+!

After this important check everything is clear.

22... ♖d7 23. ♖xf8 ♖c6 24. ♗c1!?

I had no desire to let my opponent have any counterplay whatsoever, even for two pawns. I wanted more – to win a pawn without allowing Black any freedom. Of course, 24. ♖xf7+ ♖ge7 25. ♖xg7 h6 26. h4 would have won without too many problems.

24... h6

If 24... ♖ce7 then 25. ♖g5 ♖g6 26. ♖xf7+ decides.

25. h4

This does not jeopardise the win, but 25. ♖xf7+ ♖ge7 26. ♖xg7 was simpler.

25... g6

There is nothing else.

26. ♗xh6

Here 26. ♗a3! +- was more logical.

26... ♖xh6 27. ♖xg8 ♖h5 28. g4 ♖h7 29. ♖e3 ♖e7

If 29... ♖e7 then 30. ♖f4 decides.

30. ♖f8 ♖c6 31. ♖g5 ♖xh4 32. ♖xf7+ ♖e8 33. f3!

The final precise move.

33... ♖h1 34. ♖f6

Black resigned, since both pawns are lost.

Space advantage, play on both wings, pawn sacrifice

Game 22

Shirov – Anand

FIDE World Championship,
New Delhi/Teheran 2000

1. e4 e6

Normally Anand plays 1...c5 or 1...e5. The choice of the French Defence was possibly based on the expectation that Shirov would play the 3. e5 system, which Anand did not consider dangerous for Black.

2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6 5. ♖f3 ♗b6 6. a3 a5 (6...c4) 7. ♗d3

I think the defects of the move 6...a5 can be highlighted by the reply 7. b3!. Nevertheless, the pawn sacrifice offered in the game is well worth consideration, and has much more justification here than in the variation without the insertion of the moves 6. a3 a5. Black has weakened the squares b6 and b5, whilst White has brought the square b4 under his control. These factors play an important role; for instance Black can hardly consider castling queenside now.

7... ♗d7 8. 0-0!

White sacrifices a pawn, in exchange for a big lead in development. Less promising are the continuations 8. dxc5 ♗xc5 9. 0-0 a4 10. ♖bd2 ♗ or 10. c4?! dxc4 11. ♗xc4 ♖a5.

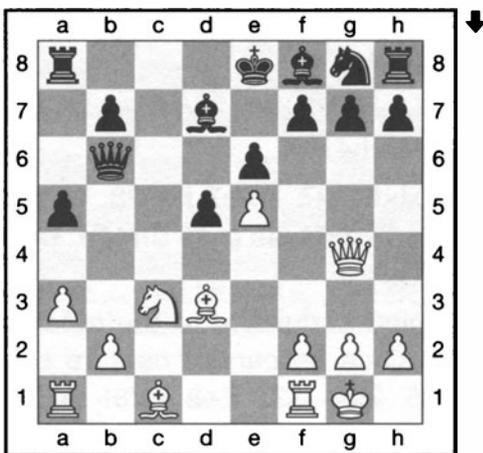

Also playable is the plan with 8. ♙c2 (although it does not appeal to me very much), e.g. 8...h5 9. 0–0 ♜h6 10. b3 ♙e7 11. ♙e3 cxd4 12. cxd4 ♟g4 13. ♟c3 ♞c8 14. ♟e2 ♟xe3 15. fxe3 g5 16. ♚d2 ♟d8 17. ♟e1 ♙b5 18. ♙d3 ♙xd3 19. ♚xd3 ♞c6 20. ♟c2 g4 21. b4 ♙g5 22. ♟c3 ♞c4 23. ♟e4! ♙e7 24. ♟d2 ♞c8 25. ♞fc1 ± , Sandipan – Barua, Raipur 2002.

8...cxd4 9. cxd4 ♟xd4 10. ♟xd4 ♚xd4
11. ♟c3 ♚b6

The inclusion of the moves 6. a3 a5 alters the evaluation of the pawn sacrifice: White now has an advantage, and the only question is whether it is sufficient to win. Black cannot really accept the second pawn, e.g. 11... ♚xe5 12. ♞e1 ♚d6 (12... ♚b8 13. ♟xd5 ♙c6 14. ♙f4 ♙d6 15. ♚g4 →) 13. ♟b5 ♙xb5 14. ♙xb5+ ♟d8 15. ♚h5 ♟f6 16. ♚xf7 ♚e7 17. ♚xe6 ♚xe6 18. ♞xe6 ♙c5 19. ♙g5 ♙d4 20. ♞d1 ♙xb2 21. ♞xd5+ ♟c8 22. ♞c5+ ♟d8 23. ♞c2 , and Black resigned (Prié – Villeneuve, Paris 1990).

12. ♚g4

This move is typical of Shirov – as usual he plays the opening very actively and probably in the strongest manner. The queen sortie to g4 nevertheless has some disadvantages: Black's reply compels White to force matters, otherwise Black will pile up on the unprotected e5 pawn and quietly complete his development. If White immediately begins play against the weakened queenside with 12. ♚e2 (the idea is ♟b3 , ♙e3 , ♞c1) then Black has the strong reply 12... ♟e7! , e.g. 13. ♟b5 ♟f5 14. g4 (14. ♞d1 ♙c5! ?) 14... ♟d4 15. ♟xd4 ♚xd4 16. ♙e3 ♚xe5 17. f4 ♚d6 18. ♙d4 ♞ or 13. ♙e3 d4 14. ♟b5 (14. ♙b5 ♙c6 ?) 14... ♙xb5 15. ♙xb5+ ♟c6 = .

12...g6

It is interesting that Anand queries the soundness of this move and suggest 12...f5 instead. But then the move 13. ♚e2 would gain in force, since the g8 knight then has only one possible development square, namely c6.

13. ♙e3 ♙c5

13... ♚d8 14. ♟b5 h5? 15. ♚xg6! ± ; 13... ♚xb2? 14. ♙d4 ♞c8! ? (14... ♚d2 15. ♞fd1 ♚h6 16. ♟b5 ♞) 15. ♞a2 (15. ♞fb1 ♚d2 16. ♞d1 h5 ♞) 15... ♚b3 16. ♞b1 ♞xc3 17. ♞xb3 ♞xb3 18. ♚d1 ♞xa3 19. ♞xa3 (19. ♞b2 ♙b4) 19... ♙xa3 20. ♚b3 ♙b4 21. ♙c3 ± .

14. ♟a4?!

Here White could have taken advantage of the weakness of the dark squares on the kingside by 14. ♚f4! (Anand). Let us consider Black's possible defences: If 14... ♟e7 15. ♚f6 ♞g8 16. ♙xc5 ♚xc5 17. ♞ac1 ♚b6 18. ♞c2! ♞ White increases his dynamic advantages – and what can Black do?

12...♙xd2+ 13. ♙xd2 ♙xd2+ 14. ♜xd2
f6

This endgame is not as simple as it looks at first sight. Gurevich lost it to Anand, but a few years previously, as we saw, he played it slightly differently and won against Sieiro González. I consider that White maintains a slight advantage, but he has to act energetically, as otherwise the position can turn against him.

On the theme of “Typical endgame” see also the game Sveshnikov – Donchev, Lvov 1983 (see exercise 48 on page 142, solution page 152).

15. ♙ac1 ♜e7 16. b4± ♜d8

It makes no sense to provoke White with 16...♜c6 into playing 17. b5, since that would fit in with his plan to gain space on both wings and restrict the black bishop.

17. ♙d3 ♙c8 18. ♙xc8+ ♜xc8 19. g4

After 19. h4?! h5 it would be difficult for White to prepare a kingside break.

19...h6?!

This weakens the light squares and Anand eventually takes advantage of this. Instead 19...♜b6 would be better, with the idea of playing ♟c4+ and, if White exchanges on c4, deploying the bishop on the long diagonal.

20. ♞h4! ♞e7

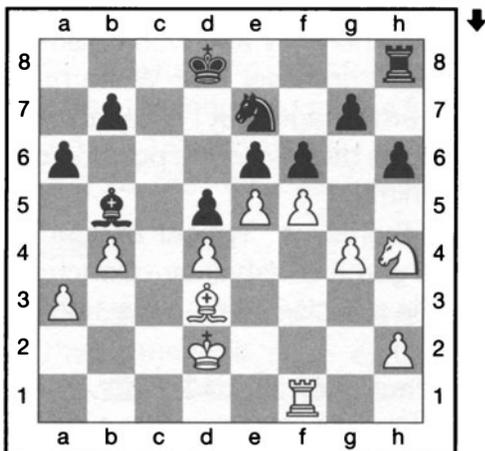

Obviously Black cannot allow the white knight to settle on g6, since then White could easily organise his kingside breakthrough. Exchanging on e5 is unfavourable for Black, since the white king would gain the central square d4 as a base from which to threaten constantly to invade the queenside.

21. $\text{f4 a6 22. ♖f1 ♜b5!?$

An interesting try. Exchanging on b5 would be unfavourable for White, since it would be easier for Black to attack the a3 pawn than for White to attack the b5 pawn. The exchange of bishops in itself is no cause for anxiety for White; he maintains a great advantage in space and Black lacks counterplay.

23. f5?

Hasty. It was better to prepare this with 23. ♖e1± .

23... $\text{h5?!$

After f7–f6, the exchange on f5 is very un-

 Using his space advantage and strongpoint at e5, White should be able to gain the ad-

Korchnoi – Kotsur

34th Olympiad, Istanbul 2000

1. d4 e6 2. e4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♔b6 5. ♗f3 ♖d7 6. a3 ♗c6 7. b4 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♖c8 9. ♖b2 ♗h6!?

Black strives to complete his development. He fails to equalise with 9...♗a5, e.g. 10. ♗bd2 ♗c4 11. ♖xc4 (11. ♗xc4 dxc4 12. ♖c1±) 11...dxc4 12. ♖c1 c3 13. ♖xc3 (13. ♖xc3 ♖xc3 14. ♖xc3 ♔a6 15. ♗e4 ♖c6 16. ♗fd2∞ or 15. d5 ♗e7!) 13...♗e7 14. 0-0 ♗d5 15. ♗e4 ♖e7 16. ♖d2 0-0 17. ♗c5 ♖c6 18. ♖g5 ♔d8 19. ♔d2 ♗c7 20. ♔e3 b6 21. ♗e4±, Sax – Nogueiras, Lucerne 1989.

10...♖a5 11. 0–0 ♖c4 12. ♗xc4 ♞xc4 13. ♖c3 ♖a6

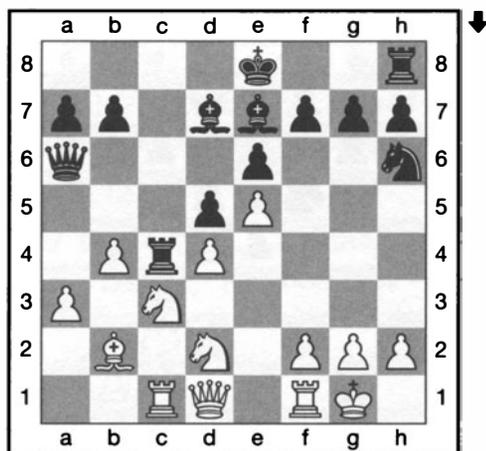

Black strengthens his grip on the light squares and in particular the a4 square, to impede the transfer of the c3 knight to c5.

14. ♞c1

The advantages of the queen's position on a6 can be seen in the variation 14. ♗d3?! (to be able to expel the rook from c4 by ♖d2) 14...♖f5 15. g4? ♞xd4 16. ♖xa6 ♞xg4+.

14...♗e7 15. ♖d2!?

White insists on playing this manoeuvre, even though it now involves a pawn sacrifice. However this sacrifice is as good as forced, since otherwise White would find it difficult to get any play.

15...♞c8

Black trusts his opponent, although taking the pawn would have led to very interesting complications, e. g. 15...♞xd4!? 16. ♖e2 (16. ♖b5 ♗xb5 17. ♗xd4 ♖f5 18. ♞c8+ ♗d8 19. ♖b3±) 16...♞h4 17. g3 (17. ♖d4?! 0–0 18. ♞c7 ♗a4 19. ♖e2 ♗d8 20. ♖xa6 bxa6 21. ♞xa7 ♗b6 22. ♖2f3 ♗xa7 23. ♖xh4= g5! 24. ♖hf3 g4 25. ♖d2 ♞c8 ♞) 17...♗a4!?

16. ♖b3

White now has a clear plan – transfer the knight to c5.

16...b6

16...0–0 17. ♖c5 ♖c6 18. a4!±.

17. b5! ♗xb5?!

Black enters complications needlessly. He should have just retreated with 17...♖b7, after which it would not have been easy for White to turn his space advantage into something substantial.

18. ♖xb5 ♞xc1 19. ♖d6+!

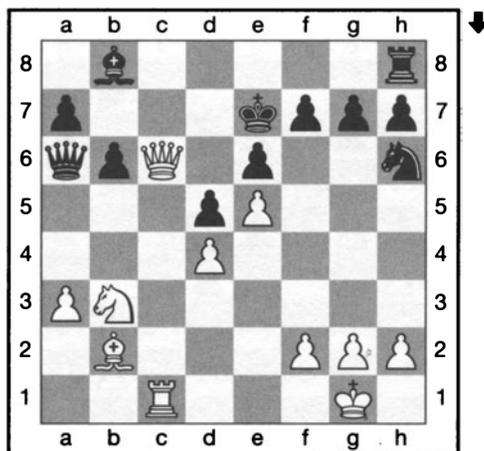

Possibly Black underestimated this move.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5

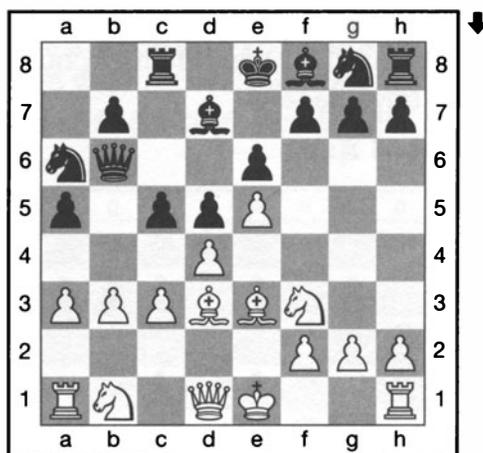

“I don’t consider myself to be an expert in the 3. e5 system, but in the 3. ♗c3 or 3. ♗d2 variations I would have had to begin my preparation somewhere around move 15, so secure is Volkov in the variations that he plays. This feeling did not lessen after the further moves 9...♗h6 10. ♗xh6 g×h6. However he went on to win this game and later in his annotations he showed that his position was fine throughout.” (Svidler).

This game continued: 11. 0–0 ♗g7 12. ♖a2 cxd4 13. cxd4 ♗b5 14. ♖d2?! 0–0 15. ♗xb5 ♖xb5=. A stronger line for White was: 14. ♗xb5+ ♖xb5 15. ♖c2 (15. ♖e2 0–0 16. ♖e3±) 15...0–0 16. ♖c1± ♖c6 17. ♖xc6 bxc6 18. ♖e3 c5 19. ♖c1 ♖c8 20. ♗bd2± or 14. ♖e2!? ♗xd3 15. ♖xd3 0–0 16. h3±.

12...c4?!

A very ambitious move. Instead, 12...♗e6 13. ♖bd2 ♗e7, was a quieter continuation, after which White could hardly count on a serious advantage.

13. bxc4 ♜xc414. e6

A tempting pawn sacrifice. But it is difficult to see how else White could develop his initiative, e.g. 14. ♖fd2 ♜c8 15. ♜a2 (15. c4? ♜b2) 15...♗e7 16. ♜h5 ♜g6±.

14...♗xe6 (14...fxe6? 15. ♖e5) 15. ♖e5 ♜c7 16. ♜a4 ♖d8 17. c4

This move is also very tempting, although it involves a rook sacrifice. However, White has a more restrained yet stronger continuation:

The crisis of the game: Black has an extra rook, but he is behind in development and his queen is stranded in enemy territory.

20...♜a2?!

It appears that Black is in serious trouble, e.g. 20...g5 21. ♖c3 b6!?! 22. ♜xa6 ♜xc3 23. cxb6 ♜c6 24. ♜a8+ ♜c8 25. b7, but Svidler discovered a fantastic defence for Black – 20...♗c8! Game 28

Sveshnikov – Komarov

Yugoslav League,
Vrnjačka Banja 1999

During my preparation for this game I realised that my opponent was an expert in the French Defence and well versed in its theoretical subtleties, so I decided to surprise him. I remembered Nimzowitsch and his 4. ♜g4 move.

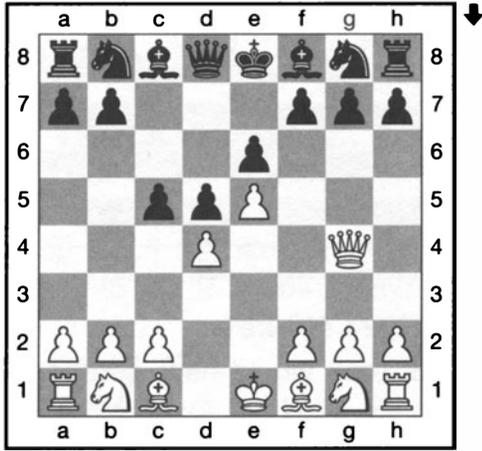

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. ♜g4?!

There is another possibility to complicate the game by means of a more reasonable pawn sacrifice: 4. ♜f3!? ♜c6 5. ♜d3 cxd4 6. 0-0 ♜ge7 (6...f5!?) 7. ♜f4 ♜g6 8. ♜g3 ♜e7 (8...♜b6?! 9. ♜bd2 ♜xb2 10. ♜b3♖; 8...f5∞) 9. ♜bd2

Game 29 Sveshnikov – Timman Tilburg 1992

This was the decisive game in our match, the first being drawn. At this time Timman was a candidate for the World Championship and was soon to play a match against Karpov. It is interesting that a few months before I had also beaten another pretender to the title (PCA version), Nigel Short, in a mini-match. Both Short and Timman had problems in the opening against me.

Sochi 1986

1. e4 c5 2. c3 e6 3. d4 d5 4. e5 ♘c6 5. ♘f3 ♗b6 6. a3 c4 7. g3 ♙d7 8. h4

White decides to take space on the king-side and secure an active post on h3 for his bishop.

8...♘a5 9. ♘bd2 ♗c6 10. ♘g5

Clearing f3 for the queen and planning to route the knight to f4.

10...h6 11. ♘h3 ♗a4 12. ♗f3 ♗c2 13. ♘f4 ♘e7 14. ♘g2!?

In closed positions such manoeuvres are fully justified. The important thing is to form a plan and bring the pieces to good squares.

14...♗h7?!

(see next diagram)

This move is much too optimistic; better was 14...♘b3 15. ♘xb3 ♗xb3 16. ♘e3 7.

15. b4!

Apparently my opponent missed this reply.

15...cxb3 16. ♔d3 ♖g8

Black's last two moves were forced. Now White gains a lasting initiative for the sacrificed pawn – in this the poor position of the black queen is an important factor.

17. ♜b1 ♔a4 18. ♛e3 ♜c8 19. c4 dxc4
20. ♛dxc4 ♛xc4 21. ♛xc4 ♛d5

The most logical: since Black is behind in development, he should try to block the position. In reply to 21...♛c6 White could choose between the violent 22. d5 and the logical 22. ♔e3!? building up the dynamic potential of his position, e. g. 22. ♔e3 ♛d8 (22...b5?! 23. ♛b2! ♔xa3 24. ♛xa4 bxa4 25. ♔b5+–)

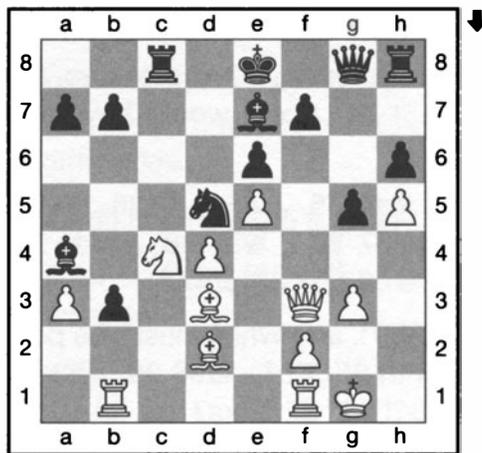

A) 23. d5!? exd5 24. ♛d6+ ♔xd6 25. exd6 ♔c6 (25...♖f8 26. ♖xd5→) 26. ♔xa7 ♛e6 27. 0–0 ♖f8 28. ♜fe1 ♖xd6 29. ♔d4 ♞;

B) 23. 0–0! ♔c6 24. ♖e2 g5 25. h5± with later doubling of the rooks on the b-file.

22. ♔d2 ♔e7 23. 0–0 g5 24. h5!

(see next diagram)

An echo of Nimzowitsch – blockade of the wing!

24...♖g7 25. ♛e3 ♔c6 26. ♛xd5?!

Here 26. ♔e4!? would have been stronger, e. g. 26...♛xe3 27. ♔xc6+ bxc6 (27...♜xc6 28. ♔xe3±) 28. ♔xe3 g4 29. ♖e4 ♖h7 30. ♖xh7 ♜xh7 31. ♜xb3±.

26...♔xd5 27. ♔e4 g4 28. ♖e2 ♔c4
29. ♔d3 ♔d5

Or 29...b5 30. ♜fc1 ♔g5 31. ♜xb3 0–0
32. ♔xc4 bxc4 33. ♜bc3±.

30. ♔b5+ ♜c6?!

Now Black errs in turn. 30...♔d8 31. ♜fc1 ♜xc1+ 32. ♔xc1 would have been better, when White would still have difficulty demonstrating an advantage.

31. ♔xc6+ bxc6

32. ♜xb3?!

I could not resist this tempting move, although I saw that the simple 32. ♖d3± kept the advantage.

32...♙xb3 33. ♖b1 0-0?

The decisive error in time pressure. Instead, 33...♙d5! 34. ♖b8+ would have led to a draw:

A) 34...♙d8 35. ♙a5 0-0 36. ♙xd8 ♖e8 (36...♙f3 37. ♖b2 ♖h7 38. ♙f6±) 37. ♖d1 ♙f3 38. ♖b3 ♖f8 39. ♙c7±;

B) 34...♙d7!, and White must give perpetual check with 35. ♖b7+ ♙e8 36. ♖b8+, since 36. ♖a6?! f6! 37. ♖xa7 c5 38. ♖b7 fxe5 39. dxc5 ♖h7!± does not work.

34. ♖xb3 ♖d8 35. ♙a5± (35. ♖b7±) 35...♖e8 36. ♖e4 ♖c8 37. ♙d2!

Not letting the queen out of jail.

37...♙d8 (37...♙g5 38. ♙b4+-) 38. ♖b7 ♙b6 39. ♙e3+- ♖d8 40. a4

Black has no defence against a4-a5.

40...♙h8 41. ♖xc6 ♖h7 42. a5 ♙xa5 43. ♖xa7

Black resigned.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♘c6 5. ♘f3 ♘h6?! 6. dxc5! ♘g4?

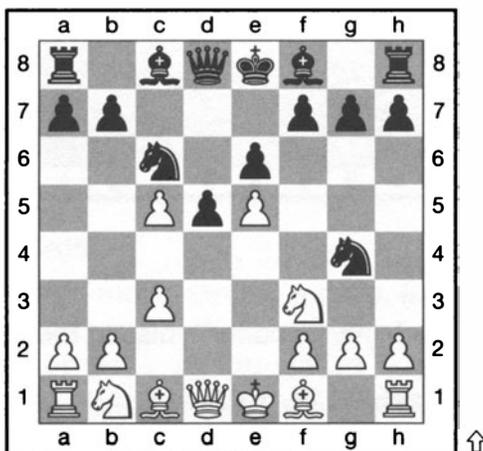

A serious error. Instead, 6...♙xc5 was better, as Bareev played later, e. g.: 7. b4! (7. ♙xh6 g×h6 8. b4 ♙f8!=, Sveshnikov – Glek, Moscow 1991) 9...♙b6

A) 8. ♙xh6 g×h6 9. b5!? (9. ♙d3) 9...♘e7 10. ♙d3±, Sveshnikov – Dukhov, Moscow 1992 (game 59 on page 116);

20. ♘b3 ♙e7 21. h×g4

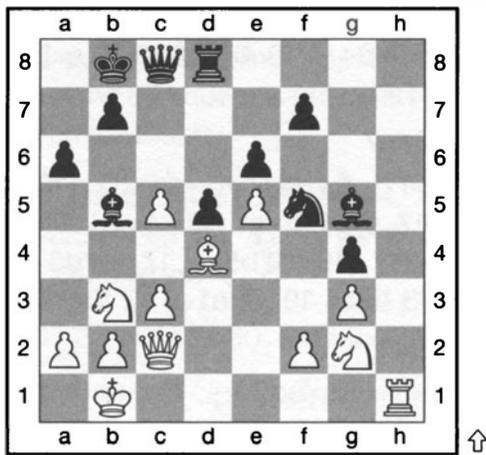

Now that the bishop has left f8, the h-file can be opened.

21...h×g4 22. ♖xh6 ♘xh6 23. ♙b1 ♘f5 24. ♖h1 ♙g5

Instead, 24...a5 25. ♖h7 a4 26. ♘c1± would have been more tenacious.

25. ♘g2! ♖c8

(see next diagram)

26. ♖h5! ♜g8 27. ♜d1

Not letting Black get counterplay on the h-file.

Russian Championship, Elista 1996

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♘c6
5. ♘f3 ♜b6

After his unfortunate experience with 5...♘h6 Bareev plays the standard theoretical move.

6. a3

Other possibilities are 6. ♙e2 and 6. ♙d3?!

6...♘h6

If 6...♙d7 7. b4 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♜c8±; or 6...a5 7. b3!?, and the a5 pawn causes Black nothing but difficulties.

7. b4 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♘f5 9. ♙b2

In my opinion 9. ♙e3?! f6!? gives Black good counter-chances.

9...♙e7

The alternative is 9...♙d7 10. g4!? ♘h6 (10...♘fe7 11. ♘c3±) 11. ♜g1!?±.

10. h4!?

A rarely played move. The idea is to control g5 or seize the initiative after 10...0-0 11. g4 ♘h6 12. ♜g1.

Also playable is 10. ♙d3 a5!∞, for which see the game Khalifman – Dolmatov, 19th EU-Cup, Rethymnon 2003 (Volume 2, game 20 on page 22).

10...h5

Here Black could consider 10...♙d7 11. g4 ♘h6 12. ♜g1±, as in Sveshnikov – Doroshkevich, Chigorin Memorial, St. Petersburg 2000.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♜c6

9. 0–0 ♜f5 10. ♜a4 ♖a5 11. ♙d2

Note that here 11. g4? loses to 11...♜fxd4
12. ♜xd4 ♜xd4 ♚.

11... ♙b4?!

The exchange of the dark-squared bishops is unfavourable for Black. The queen must retreat with 11...♖d8!. Then 12. ♜c5 ♜cxd4 13. ♜xd7 ♖xd7 14. ♜xd4 ♜xd4 15. ♙d3♞ gives White compensation for the pawn, of course, but no more. Game 37

Sveshnikov – Lputian

GMA, Moscow 1989

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♘e7
5. ♗f3 ♗ec6 6. ♙d3

Against V. Kovačević (Belgrade 1988) I continued with 6. h4, but gained no advantage:

6. h4 ♗d7 7. h5 f6 8. exf6 ♗xf6 9. h6 g6
10. ♙g5 ♘; perhaps 6. ♙e3!?,

6...b6 7. ♙g5 ♗d7

7...♙e7 8. ♙xe7 ♗xe7±.

8. 0–0 ♙a6 9. dxc5 bxc5

9...♙xd3 10. ♗xd3 ♙xc5 11. ♗bd2±.

10. ♙xa6 ♗xa6 11. c4!?

White plays to restrict the opposing minor pieces.

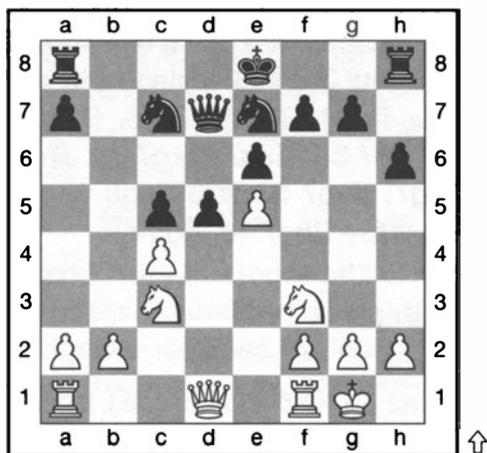

11...h6

11...dxc4?! 12. ♗xd7+ ♘xd7 13. ♗a3±.

12. ♙h4

I had reached this position on my board at home and I considered it appropriate for a principled struggle.

12...♗c7 13. ♗c3 ♙e7 14. ♙xe7 ♗xe7

White has a marked advantage, since each of his pieces is better posted than its black counterpart. Furthermore White has a specific target – the c5 pawn. Black's main problem is the poorly placed knight at c7. If he plays dxc4, the c5-pawn becomes very weak. Sooner or later Black will have to play d5–d4, and then White will transfer a knight to d3, with a clear plan of attacking the kingside. These are the dynamic features of the position.

15. ♗c1

To be able to respond to 15...0–0 with 16. ♗e4 followed by ♗d6.

15...♗c8 (obviously the only move)

16. ♗e2

Here and on the previous move, ♗a4 was not dangerous for Black thanks to the reply ♗a6.

Fritz suggests 16. ♗e1!?,

16...0–0 17. ♗fd1

Renewing the threat of ♗e4 and ♗d6. If 17...♗a6 then 18. ♗b5 is possible.

17...♗c6

The move is justified tactically: 18. b4 cxb4 19. cxd5 ♗a6, e.g. 20. d6 bxc3 21. ♗xa6 ♗xa6 22. dxe7 ♗fe8 with a draw.

18. b3!

With the threat 19. ♗a4 ♗a6 20. cxd5 exd5 21. ♗xc5 ♗xc5 22. b4.

18...♗fd8 19. ♗d2 ♗d7 20. ♗a4

If 20. cxd5 exd5 21. b4 c4 22. ♗d4 ♗b6 Black can hold the position. But now he has to commit himself in the centre.

20...d4 (forced) 21. ♗e1 a5

Played in anticipation of the necessity to play ♗c7–a6. Black establishes a lasting grip on the b4 square.

22. ♖d3 ♕a6 23. ♜e1 ♜dc7?

Not concrete enough. The immediate 23...♜e8 (or 23...♜f8) was more accurate, planning ♖e7–c8–b6. In the absence of direct threats Black has relaxed his attention ...

24. h4!

As Alekhine taught, when you have a pawn on e5 you must attack the enemy king.

24...♜e8 25. ♖g4 ♖h7

If 25...♖c8, then 26. ♖f4 ♖h7 27. ♖h5 ♖g8 28. ♜d3, and the rook enters play. White seems to have a decisive attack.

26. ♜e4 ♖c8 27. ♖f3 ♖b6 28. ♖xb6 ♖xb629. ♜g4 ♜g8

If 29...♖b4 there follows 30. ♖f4 ♜g8 31. ♖h5 ♖b7 32. ♖f6 or simply 32. ♖g3.

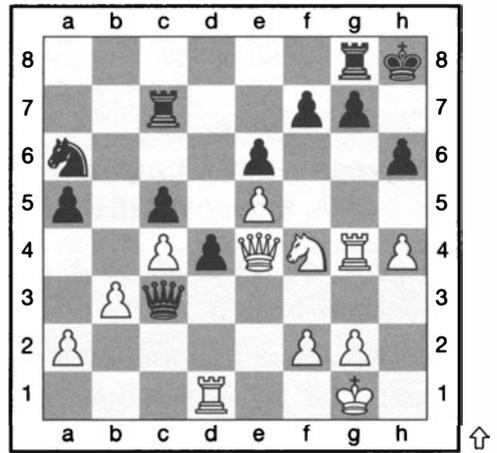

30. ♖f4 ♖b4

Now 30...♖b4 is pointless. White would drive the knight back with a2–a3 and the second rook would come into the attack via d3. The queen raid distracts White to a considerable extent and almost proves successful.

31. ♜d1 ♖c3 32. ♖e4+ ♖h8

(see next diagram)

32...g6 33. h5+–.

Here I used up nearly all my remaining time (not much, I have to say) but I still went astray. Stronger is 33. ♜d3! ♖c2 34. a3 (threatening 34...♖b4) 34...♖b8 35. ♖h5 ♖d7 (c6), and now comes the “Karpovian” move (as Razuvaev termed it) 36. ♖h2!, threatening to capture on g7 without allowing Black to check on c1.

33. ♜g3

Now the pace of the white attack slows, although it should still be winning.

33...♖b2 34. ♖h5 ♖b4 35. ♖g4

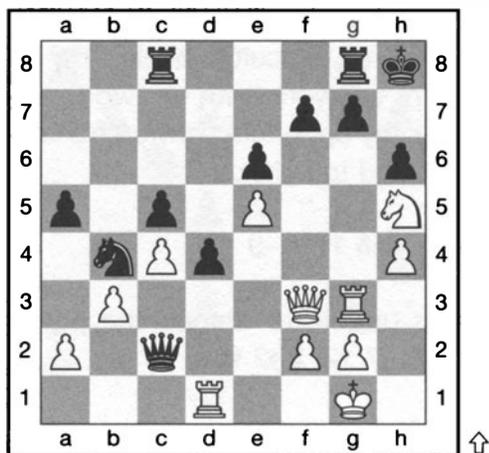

Now the threat is 36. ♖f6, but there is a simple defence. Here 35. ♖f4? would fail to 35...♖e2. But 35. ♖f3! instead was winning, e.g. 35...♜cc8 (35...♖c2 36. ♖xg7 ♜xg7 37. ♖f6 ♖h7 38. ♜xg7 ♖xg7 39. ♖d8+–) 36. ♖xg7! ♜xg7 37. ♖f6 ♜cg8 38. ♖xh6+ ♜h7 39. ♖f6+ ♜hg7 40. ♜g5+–.

35...♜cc8

35...♖xa2 36. ♖f6 ♖c3 37. ♜e1 ♜cc8=.

36. ♖f3 ♖c2

(see next diagram)

37. ♖f6!?

Seeing that my attack was going nowhere and with my flag hanging, I was prepared to force a draw. After 37...gxf6! White would have no more than a perpetual check. However, as he told me after the game, Lputian thought that he could play for a win, and so he avoided the draw, underestimating the strength of my next move.

37...♗c6?

37...gxf6 38. ♖xf6+ ♘h7 39. ♖xf7+=.

38. ♜e1! ♜g8?

Now it is too late to capture on f6: 38...gxf6 39. ♖xf6+ ♘h7 40. ♖xf7+ ♘h8 41. ♖xe6 ♖d2 42. ♜e3! So Black saves the exchange.

Instead 38...d3! was worth consideration: 39. ♗xg8 d2 40. ♜f1 ♜xg8 41. ♖d1 (41. ♖xc6 d1 ♖ 42. ♜xd1 ♖xd1+ 43. ♘h2 ♖d4±) 41...♖xa2 42. ♜d3 a4 43. bxa4 ♖xc4 44. ♜xd2 ♖xh4 45. f4 ♗d4± 46. ♖e1 ♖e7 47. a5 ♜a8 48. ♜a2±.

39. ♖g4 ♖g6 40. ♖d1

I managed to play this move with seconds to spare. And then something unexpected happened – Lputian resigned. He thought that he was losing his queen after 40...♖f5 41. ♜f3. In fact the winning move was 41. ♜g5! and if 41...♖f4 then 42. ♜xg7. To be frank I only saw this later, when I was able to consider the position calmly and at leisure.

Sveshnikov – Razuvaev

GMA, Palma de Mallorca 1989

Yuri Razuvaev and I have been battling each other in the French Defence for many years now. In December 1988 I managed to win quite a good game against him, and now came a new encounter.

1. e4 c5

A little finesse. If immediately 1...e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 White has the extra possibility of 4. ♗f3 ♗c6 5. ♗d3.

2. c3

Objectively stronger is 2. ♗f3 or 2. f4, but I wanted to stick to my guns.

2...e6 3. d4 d5 4. e5

The starting point. The rest of the proof was a more difficult matter.

4...♗c6 5. ♗f3 ♖b6

If you want to play this position with Black, then I recommend you consider the immediate attack on the e5 pawn with 5...f6!?. Although White gained an advantage in the game Nimzowitsch–Levenfish, Carlsbad 1911 with 6. ♗b5 ♗d7 7. 0–0 ♖b6 8. ♗xc6 bxc6 9. exf6 ♗xf6 10. ♗e5 ♗d6 11. dxc5 ♗xc5 12. ♗g5 (game 56 on page 112) I think that Levenfish went wrong on move 6; the immediate 6...♖b6 is better, with a complicated game.

6. a3

The move 6. ♗d3 was tried in our previous encounter. As well as this and the move played in the game, there is 6. ♗e2, which Victor Kupreichik has helped develop.

6...♗d7

Another more radical possibility was 6...c4. In that case the character of the position changes but that's another story, one played out in my four duels with grandmaster Viacheslav Eingorn.

7. ♖e2

White should fight for advantage with 7. b4!? cxd4 (I doubt we need dwell for long on 7...c4?!, since after 8. a4! White's space advantage on the kingside can prove decisive in the future) 8. cxd4 ♖c8 and now:

9. ♗b2 ♗a5 10. ♗bd2 ♗c4 11. ♗xc4 (11. ♗xc4?! dxc4 12. ♖c1 c3!?) 11...dxc4 12. ♖c1 ♖a6 13. d5 exd5 14. ♗xd5 with a complicated game.

The simple 9. ♗e3 deserves consideration, e.g. 9...♗h6 10. ♗d3 ♗f5 11. 0-0 ♗e7 12. ♗xf5 exf5 13. ♗c3 ♗e6 14. ♗a4 ♖d8 15. ♖c1 0-0 16. ♗c5 with a slight edge to White, as in the game Kontić–Ulibin, Titograd 1987.

Those were early days in the development of the theory of this line. Of course, today you can find out the correct way to play this line just by looking at the latest games of first category players. But we should show how all this developed.

7...♗h6!

In Romanishin–Foisor (Tbilisi 1986) Black obtained a comfortable game after 7...♗ge7 8. dxc5 ♖c7! 9. 0-0 ♗xe5 10. ♗xe5 ♖xe5 11. ♗d2 ♖c7 12. b4 g6!. Instead of 11. ♗d2 the immediate 11. b4 is interesting.

8. b4 cxd4 9. ♗xh6?!

It would have been better to play 9. cxd4 ♗f5 10. ♗b2 (10. ♗e3 ♗e7 11. 0-0 0-0 ♖) 10...♗a5! 11. ♗bd2 ♗c4 ♖.

9...d3!?

An interesting idea: Black deprives the e5 pawn of support, although he loses a tempo and the white bishop comes to a more active position. The natural 9...gxh6 10. cxd4 ♗g7 11. ♗c3 0-0 12. ♗a4 ♖d8 13. ♗c5 allows White to take the initiative.

10. ♗xd3

Confronted by something unexpected, my resolve weakened and I offered a draw. I think this was my first serious error of the game. It is not difficult to explain my offer: at that point we were both on two out of two. However, my opponent showed his character and decided to fight on.

10...gxh6 11. 0-0

White is unable to defend the pawn after 11. ♖a2 ♗g7 12. ♖e2 ♖c7.

11...♗g7 12. ♖e1

12. ♖e2 0-0 13. b5 ♗e7! ♖.

12...0-0

The complications arising after 12...f6?! 13. exf6 ♗xf6 14. b5!? (14. ♖c2 0-0-0! †) 14...♗e7 15. ♗e5± are rather in White's favour. Instead, 12...♖c7!? 13. ♖e2± deserved attention.

13. ♗bd2

13. ♖c2 ♖c7! attacking the e5 pawn.

13...f6

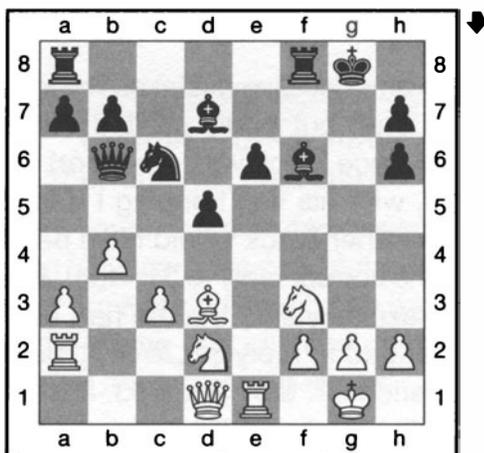

Black's play is understandable: it is necessary to open the f-file, double the rooks on it, and transfer the bishop from d7 to g6 or h5 via e8. White meanwhile will try to open the game with c2-c4.

14. exf6 ♗xf6

If 14...♖xf6 then 15. c4! would disturb the enemy pawn centre. There are two good alternatives in 15. ♖c2 e5 16. ♗xh7+ ♗h8 17. b5!± and 15. ♗b3 e5 16. ♗c2 ♗e7 17. ♖xe5 ♖xf3 18. ♖xe7 ♖xf2+ 19. ♗h1 ♖f7 20. ♖xd5±.

15. ♖a2!

(see next diagram)

A flexible move that has a tactical justification. If 15. ♖c2 ♜f7 (15...e5 ⇒) 16. b5 ♘e7 ♞.

15...♗h8?!

More critical was 15...e5! 16. c4 e4 17. cxd5 exd3 18. dxc6 ♗xc6 19. ♖b3+ ♗h8 20. ♖xd3 ♜ad8 with compensation for the sacrificed pawn. Instead, 15...♗xc3?! fails to 16. ♗xh7+ ♗xh7 (16...♗h8 17. ♗b1! → with multiple threats.) 17. ♖c2+ ♗g8 18. ♖xc3 e5? 19. ♖d3 and Black is in a bad way.

16. c4!

Now it is not easy for Black to mobilise his centre pawns. Also playable was 16. ♗b3 ♗xc3 17. ♗c5 ♖c7 18. ♗xe6 ♗xe6 19. ♜xe6 ±.

16...a5?!

Provoking a crisis. Instead 16...♜ae8 was to be considered, although the position arising after 17. ♖b1 ♜e7 18. ♗b3 ♗c3 (or 18...dxc4 19. ♗xc4) 19. ♜e3 is also better for White.

17. b5 ♗d4

It would be better to play 17...♗e7 18. ♖e2 ± but Razuvaev decided to simplify the position.

18. ♗xd4

Or 18. ♗e5! ♗e8 19. ♖g4 ±.

18...♖xd4 19. ♗f3 ♖f4 20. ♜e3?

A blunder, I simply missed that after 20...dxc4 21. ♜e4 ♖d6! it is not possible to recapture on c4, since 22. ♗xc4 is impossible and if 22. ♜xc4 then 22...♗xb5. The simple 20. ♜ae2!? followed by 21. ♖b1 or 21. ♖c2 would have kept the advantage; for example 20...♜ae8 21. ♖c2 ± or 20...♗c3 21. ♜f1 ±. The alternative 20. ♜c2 ± also keeps a stable advantage, since Black has great difficulties with the defence of the e6 pawn. But now White loses control of the blockading squares e5 and d4 and Black gets good counterplay.

20...dxc4!

Seizing his opportunity.

21. ♗xh7

White has no good moves here, so I decided at least to weaken the black king's protection. If 21. ♖a4 ♜ac8 22. ♗f1 ♜c5 ♞.

21...♗xb5 22. ♗b1

If 22. ♗e4 the resolute 22...c3! 23. ♗xb7 ♜ad8 is unpleasant, since the c3 pawn is very threatening.

22...♜ad8 23. ♜d2

I wanted to exchange the inactive rook, but it is possible that 23. ♖c2 was stronger, although after 23...♜f7 Black's position is clearly better.

23...c3 24. ♖c2

If 24. ♜xd8 ♜xd8 25. ♖c1 ♗d4 ♞.

24...♖f5 25. ♜xd8 ♜xd8 26. ♖c1 (The only move.) 26...♖d5.

After 26...♔d3?!, anticipating 27. ♖xd3 ♖xd3 28. ♗e1 ♔g5! 29. ♔xd3 ♔xc1 30. ♔xf5 exf5 with a depressing endgame for White, or 28. ♔xd3 ♗xd3 29. ♗xh6+ ♖g8♯, White can turn the tables completely with 28. ♔c2!!±, e.g. 28...♗d5 29. ♗xh6+ ♖g8 30. ♗g6+ ♔g7 31. ♔xd3+-.

27. ♔c2!

Razuvaev missed this. He was expecting to win prettily after the natural 27. ♖e1? ♗d2!! 28. ♗xd2 cxd2 29. ♗d1 dxe1♗+! (29...♔a4 30. ♖f1 ♯) 30. ♗xe1 ♔a4-+. Now the struggle flares up again with renewed intensity.

27...♖d7?!

Not seeing any concrete threats, Black plays a prophylactic move. 27...♖g7♯ was better.

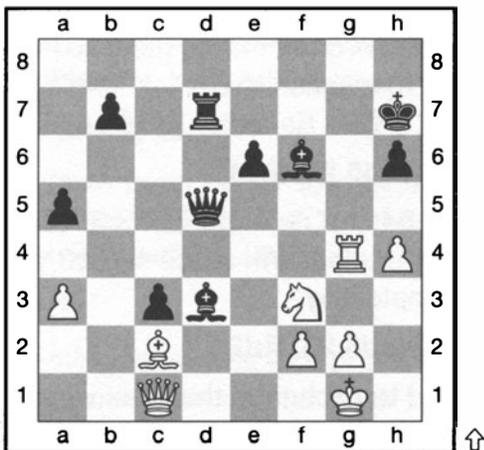

28. h4!?

Creating an escape square for the king and at the same time controlling g5. The alternative was 28. ♖e1♯.

28...♖g7 29. ♖e4 ♔d3

It is understandable that Black seeks to ensure his king's safety by exchanging bishops.

30. ♖g4+ ♖h7?

This natural move played in time trouble actually brings my opponent to the edge of defeat. The correct 30...♖f7! 31. ♔xd3 ♗xd3 32. ♗xh6 c2 33. ♗h5+ ♖f8! (33...♖e7? 34. ♗c5+ und ♖c4) 34. ♗c5+ ♔e7 35. ♗c8+ ♖d8 would still have won.

31. ♖d4?

The last and decisive mistake. The idea was a good one, but badly carried out. I was rushing, since Black was very short of time. Instead, with his flag hanging I doubt very much whether Black would have been able to find the correct reply to 31. ♗d4!. After the game Razuvaev said that he had seen this and intended to reply 31...♗c4?!, based on the variation 32. ♗b1 ♖xd4 33. ♖xd4 ♗xd4 34. ♔xd3+ ♖h8 and White has to fight for the draw. But 32. ♔b3! is a different story:

a) 32...♖xd4 33. ♔xc4 ♔xc4 34. ♗b1+ ♖h8 35. ♗g6 ♖xg4 36. ♗xf6+ and 37. ♗xc3 with good winning chances for White.

b) 32...♗a6 33. ♗xe6 ♗d6 34. ♗f4! ♗e7 (34...c2? 35. ♗xd6 c1♗+ 36. ♖h2 ♖xd6 37. ♗f8+ ♖h8 38. ♖g8♯) 35. ♗b8 and Black is lost.

If instead 31...♔f5 White can play 32. ♗xf5 exf5 33. ♗f4.

So Black should play 31...♔xc2! 32. ♗xc2+ ♖h8 33. ♗g6 ♔g7 34. ♗xe6 and now:

a) 34...♗d1+? 35. ♖h2 c2 36. ♗e8+ ♖h7 37. ♗f8+! ♔xf8 (or 37...♖g8 38. ♗g6+ ♖h7 39. ♗h8+! ♔xh8 40. ♗f8#!) 38. ♗g6+ ♖h8 39. ♗g8♯.

b) 34...c2! and White has to take perpetual check with 35. ♗e8+ ♖h7 36. ♗g6+. But Black would have had to find this variation in time trouble! This would have been the logical conclusion to the game.

31...♔xd4 (The only move.) 32. ♔xd3+ ♖g7 33. ♗f4 ♔xf2+! (The most precise.) 34. ♖xf2 ♗xd3 35. ♗e5+ ♖h7 36. ♗xe6 c2 37. ♗e5 c1♗

Or 37...♗d2+ 38. ♖g3 ♖g7+.

38. ♗xd3 ♗d2+

White resigned.

Game 39

Casper – Uhlmann

DSV Tournament, East Berlin 1982

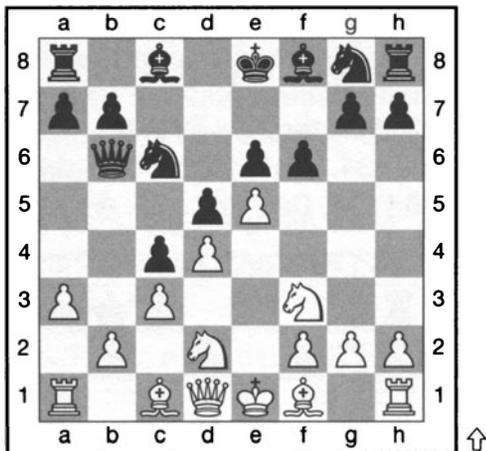

For many years the German grandmaster Wolfgang Uhlmann was one of the top specialists in the French Defence. In this game he faced a young and talented compatriot, who carried out a splendid attack.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6
5. ♟f3 ♜b6 6. a3 c4 7. ♟bd2

Here is an example from modern practice:

(Ni Hua–Bareev, Peking 2003).

7...f6

Uhlmann's trademark. He has closed the centre with c5–c4 and now begins to undermine it. White has a space advantage but his pieces are not placed very harmoniously.

8. ♟e2

White develops quickly and prepares to attack in the centre with b3 und c4. Less dangerous for Black would be 8. exf6 ♟xf6 9. b3 cxb3 10. ♟b1 ♟d6 11. ♟d3 0–0 12. 0–0 e5! or 8. g3 fxe5 9. ♟xe5 ♟xe5 10. dxe5 ♟c5 11. ♜h5+ g6 12. ♜e2 ♟e7 13. ♟g2 ♟d7 14. 0–0 0–0–0 15. ♟f3 ♞ (Honfi–Uhlmann, Solingen 1974).

12. b3! cxb3 13. c4!

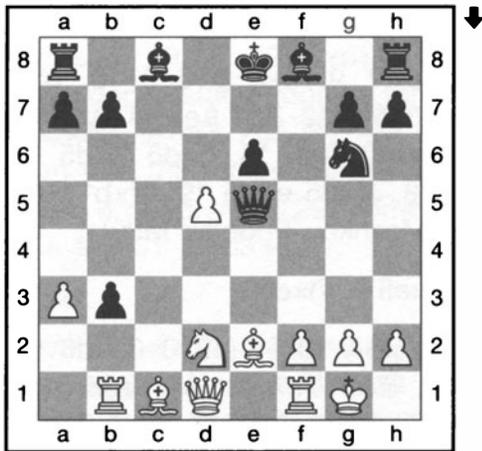

The signal for the attack. White sacrifices two pawns, after which all his pieces spring to life. The d2 knight suddenly has access to a lot of squares, the bishops have dangerous fields of fire and the queen's rook comes into action. Meanwhile, Black requires two tempi to evacuate his king to safety away from the centre.

15...♖xd5?!

Instead of this, the tempo-gaining 15...♗d6!? was much better, after which in the variation 16. ♘f3 (an unclear position arises from 16. ♗b5+ ♘f7 17. ♘f3 ♖xd5 18. ♗xb3 ♗ or 18. ♘g5+ ♗e7 ♞) 16...♖xd5 17. ♗xb3 ♖xd1 18. ♗xd1 White must accept an exchange of queens. But even without the queens he has a strong initiative, e.g. 18...♗c7 19. ♗b5+ ♗e7 20. a4 a6 21. ♗d3 ♗. If Black chooses 17...♘f4 (instead of 17...♖xd1) then 18. ♗b5+ ♘f7 (18...♗e7) 19. ♖c2± (19. g3!? ♗) 19...♗f5, and White gains a strong attack with both 20. ♗d3, e.g.: 20...♘xd3 21. ♗xd3 ♗e8 22. ♖e2 ♗c7 23. ♗c3 ♗b8□ 24. ♗d1 e5 25. ♘g5+ ♗g8 (25...♗g6 26. h4+--) 26. ♖b5 ♖f8 27. ♖d5+ ♗h8 28. ♘f7+ ♗g8 29. ♘d8+ +- or 24...♗g8 25. ♖c4 b6 26. ♖c6 ♖f7 27. ♖a4 ♗ (but not 27. ♘g5? ♖h5+-), and 20. ♖xf5+ exf5 21. ♗d1, for instance 21...♗c7 22. ♗c3 ♗b8 23. ♗c4+ ♗g6 24. g3 ♘h3+ 25. ♗g2 f4 26. ♗d3+ +-.

Game 41

Grishuk – Radjabov

FIDE Grand Prix, Dubai 2002

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6 5. ♖f3 ♖d7 6. ♖e2 ♖c8 7. 0–0 a6

A very crafty plan by Black: he delays committing the g8 knight, and meanwhile White lacks any point of attack. Also Black has made provision against the move 8. d×c5 with the useful moves ♖c8 and a6. Nevertheless White has many interesting possibilities.

8. ♖h1!?

The plan chosen by Grischuk is very interesting, although I prefer Oll's idea 8. d×c5!? ♖xc5 9. ♖f4 ♖ge7 10. ♖d3 f5 11. exf6 g×f6 12. ♖h4 0–0 13. ♖g4+ ♖h8 14. ♖h5 f5 15. b4 ♖b6 16. ♖d2 ♖c7∞ (Oll – Ivanchuk, Polanica Zdrój 1998). The moves 6...♖c8 and 7...a6 were a waste of time after all, and the plan of giving up the pawn centre and playing for a blockade was very logical.

8. ♖h1!? is Grischuk's trademark move, of which he is very fond. The move keeps open many possibilities: White prepares g2–g4 and avoids a zwischenzug knight check on f3 in various lines where Black captures on d4 or e5 with a knight. However, moving the king into the corner consumes time; I think that White should choose a more concrete plan. In this respect he has very many possibilities available, for instance:

A) 8. a3 c×d4 9. c×d4 ♖ge7 10. ♖c3 ♖f5 11. g4 (11. ♖e3 ♖e7 12. ♖d3 ♖xe3 13. fxe3 0–0 14. ♖f2 f6 15. ♖c2 f5 =, Ivanović – Bareev, Moscow (Blitz) 1993) 11...♖h4 12. ♖xh4 ♖xh4 13. ♖e3 g5 14. ♖a4 h5±, Xie Jun – Karpov, Guangzhou (Rapidplay) 2000;

I would recommend choosing 8. d×c5 or 8. ♖a3. Also 8. ♖e3 deserves attention.

8...♖ge7?!

In the next game of their tie-breaker, Radjabov chose another, more logical, plan: 8...cxd4!?, with which he showed the quiet 8. ♖h1 to be unnecessary and at the same time pre-empted White's possible dxc5 (see Volume 2, Chapter 1 "Theoretically important games for independent analysis", game 39, page 34).

9. dxc5!

If White gives up his pawn centre like this, Black usually gets sufficient counterplay in the middle of the board. Here however Black has lost time with the unnecessary moves a6 and ♖c8, which should allow White to count on some advantage.

9...♭g6 10. ♖e3 ♖cxe5 11. ♖xe5 ♖xe5

2.4 Play on both wings

Play on both wings is the highest form of mastery in chess. It is another matter that it is not a simple task to watch over both wings and the centre at the same time; every single move acquires great importance and a single mistake can ruin all your previous efforts. But White's plan is clear: first, create weaknesses in the enemy kingside (or threaten to attack the king) so as to hinder kingside castling, and then start some activity on the queenside. If Black manages to castle kingside after all, then play switches back from the queenside to the kingside.

The game Paulsen – Schwarz, Leipzig 1879 (game 2 on page 13), which the reader will have seen in Chapter 1, is a classical model of play on both wings. Now let us analyse examples from the play of modern grandmasters.

Play on both wings

Game 42

Sveshnikov – Vaganian Moscow 1985

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5

Since one of Black's main problems in this system is his bad light-squared bishop, he can try to exchange it as soon as possible. This is the plan that Vaganian chooses here.

3... ♖e7 4. ♗f3 b6 5. c3 ♜d7

All according to Black's plan to exchange the light-squared bishops. Of course the immediate 5... ♗a6? fails to 6. ♗xa6 ♗xa6 7. ♜a4+.

6. a4

In the game Kupreichik – Vaganian (Russian Cup, Kiev 1984, game 16 on page 32) White continued 6. ♗bd2 a5 7. h4!? and gained a fine victory after a sharp struggle. But the move 6. ♗bd2 seems imprecise to me: the c1 bishop is blocked and the d4 pawn can become a target. After the move in the game the white pieces develop more harmoniously.

6... a5?!

A consistent but dubious decision, since now Black will find it more difficult to break with c7–c5, and queenside castling will be very risky. 6...c5 is better.

7. ♗a3!

Here the knight is well placed, taking part in the action on the queenside yet having easy access to the kingside (♗c2–e3–g4).

7... ♗a6 8. ♗xa6 ♗xa6 9. 0–0

More energetic is 9. h4!?, to take space and begin to play against the e7 knight. If this knight goes to c6, the kingside will be weakened. The reply to 9...h5 will be 10. ♗g5, delaying a decision about where to develop the queen's knight and the queen. If Black does not play 9...h5, then White increases the pressure with 10. h5.

9...c6

Such moves are not made willingly, and if the pawn had to be advanced, it would have been better to move it to c5. 9...♗f5 also deserved consideration.

10. ♜d3

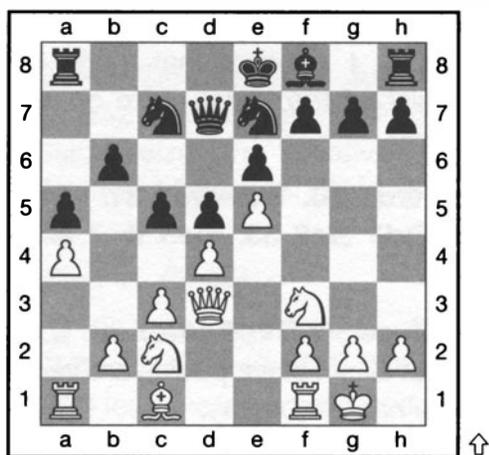

Here 10. b3 or 10. ♗c2 was possible.

10... ♗c7 11. ♗c2

Here 11. b3 was stronger, to answer 11...c5 with 12. c4, planning ♗b5, ♗d1 and ♗a3. Opening the position favours White, since he is ahead in development.

11...c5

(see next diagram)

Another drawback of 13...h5 becomes apparent – kingside castling will walk into a mating attack: 17...0-0 18. ♖g5! g6 (18...f6 19. exf6 gxf6 20. ♗h3) 19. g4 etc. And the knight cannot establish itself at f5.

18. b3

White's play is very logical: with 12. h4 he forced Black to weaken his kingside, and now Black has problems with castling. Taking advantage of the disconnected black rooks and the bad knight on c7, White starts an attack on the queenside. If Black connects his rooks by castling on the kingside, White will switch to the other plan: attacking the king. It is all quite simple; many of my games with this system have followed this pattern.

18...cxb3 19. ♗xb3 ♗f5

Trying to change the situation on the board somehow, Black voluntarily takes on new weaknesses. Instead, 19...♗c6 offered poor prospects in view of 20. ♗ab1, with the idea of ♗b2.

20. ♗xf5 exf5 21. ♗g5 ♗h6

So the black king has been left in the middle, and its fate seems unenviable. Black would also have a difficult position after 21...g6 22. ♗b2 ♗c6 23. ♗b1 0-0 24. ♗xb6 ♗xb6 25. ♗xb6 ♗xc3 26. e6!. And if 21...♗e6 then 22. ♗xe6 ♗xe6 (22...fxe6 23. ♗a6, and the b-pawn is lost) 23. ♗b5+ preventing castling, since after 23...♗d7 24. ♗xa5 the two rooks win easily against the queen.

22. ♗h3

The knight transfers to the blockading square f4. The computer's suggestion of 22. e6! is also good.

We can now assess the results of the opening: White has a big advantage in space and a lead in development, as well as the more active pieces. The only virtue of Black's position is the absence of pawn weaknesses. White's task is to create some such weaknesses.

12. h4! c4

A big decision, since it gives White the possibility of a b2–b3 break, whilst Black is forced to wait passively. Better was 12...♗c6 13. h5 h6 with some defensive chances.

13. ♗e2 h5

This is to secure a base for the knight at g6 or f5, but now there is a weakness on h5. It was preferable to play 13...b5 14. axb5 ♗xb5 15. ♗g5 ♗c6, seeking counterplay on the queenside.

14. ♗g5 ♗g6

After 14...♗f5 15. ♗e3 ♗xe3 16. fxe3 Black might begin to have problems with his f7 pawn. The c7 knight is very badly placed, and any further piece exchanges will just highlight this.

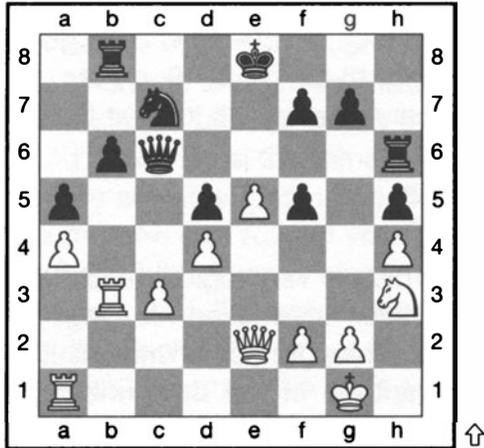

15. ♗fb1! ♗e7 16. ♗xe7

The simplest; if 16. b3 f6 17. exf6 gxf6 18. ♗e3 ♗c6 Black gains counterplay.

16...♗xe7

If 16...♗xe7, then 17. g3! is unpleasant.

17. ♗e3 ♗b8

22...♖c6*23. ♗f3!

White takes aim at the weak black pawns. Since the opponents's king is insecure, it suits White to keep the queens on.

23...♖c4 24. ♜ba3!

The most difficult move of the game, effectively depriving Black of all counterplay. White could probably also win by 24. ♜ab1 ♖xa4 25. ♗xf5 ♖d7 or 24. ♜bb1 ♜c6, but Black would have some counter-chances. Now he is forced to give up a pawn or acknowledge the futility of the manoeuvre ♜h8–h6.

24...g6 25. ♗f4 ♖d7 26. ♜b1 ♖c6 27. ♜ab3 b5

Here 27...♖xa4 fails to 28. c4! with a quick win. Neither does 27...♜hh8 help – after 28. e6! ♗xe6 29. ♗xd5 ♖xd5 30. ♜xb6+ White wins the queen.

28. ♗g3!

This is more accurate than 28. a×b5+ ♖b6!, granting Black a breathing space, whereas now the curtain can be brought down. Note: in this game several different white plans are woven together: blockade, exploitation of a weak dark-square complex and even an attack on the king. But one main theme runs throughout the game: play on both wings.

28...♜h7 29. ♗g5

Having planned to play this if Black played 28...♜hh8, I missed that here I could have finished the game more quickly with 29. ♗xg6!.

29...♖d7 30. ♗f6 ♖c6 31. e6+ ♗xe6 32. ♗d3 ♖c8 33. ♗e5 ♖c7 34. ♗xg6 ♜b7

Or 34...f×g6 35. ♖xe6+ ♖d7 36. ♖xg6 etc. Note that all six black pawns are very weak. Now the harvest begins.

35. ♖xf5 ♜g7 36. ♜xb5 ♜xb5 37. ♜xb5 ♖d7 38. ♖xd5

Black resigned (38...♖xd5 39. ♗e7+).

Sveshnikov – Nevednichy

Bled Open 1991

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♗c6 5. ♗f3 ♖b6 6. a3 ♗d7 7. b4 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♜c8

11...dxc4 12. ♖c1 a5

Here 12...♖a6 (with the idea of 13. ♗d2 b5 14. ♗e4 ♕c6 with counterplay) is weaker because of 13. d5! exd5 14. ♖xd5 ♗e7 15. ♖e4 b5 16. ♗d4±.

An interesting exchange sacrifice was played in the game Mark Tseitlin–Yusupov (Riga 1984): 14...♖xc4!? 15. ♕xc4 bxa3 16. ♕c3 ♖c6 17. ♕e2 ♗e7 18. 0–0. Here Black blundered his queen with 18...♗d5? (18...♖b6 was necessary) and soon lost after 19. ♕a5 ♕e7 20. ♖xc6 ♕xc6 21. ♖b3 0–0 22. ♕b5.

Lputian demonstrated another plan against me in a later game (Moscow 1991): 14...♖d8 15. axb4 b5! (weaker is 15...♕xb4+ 16. ♕c3 ♕xc3+ 17. ♖xc3 or 16...♕e7? 17. ♕a5) 16. ♗d6+ ♕xd6 17. exd6 ♗f6 18. ♖c5 (18. ♕d3 0–0 19. ♖c5!) 18...♗d5 19. ♕d3 0–0 20. 0–0 ♖b6! 21. ♖h5 f5 22. ♖fc1 ♖a8!?

15. axb4 ♕xb4+ 16. ♕c3 ♕xc3+?!

Now White has a stable advantage. Instead, 16...♕e7 17. ♖b3 b5 was worth considering, to gain compensation for the pawn after 18. ♗d6+ ♕xd6 19. exd6 ♗f6 20. ♕xb5 0–0.

17. ♖xc3 ♗f8 (the only move) 18. ♖a3 ♖b8 19. ♗d6 ♖d8 20. ♖f3 ♗h6

Here 20...♕e8 would fail to 21. ♕c4 (21. ♕b5 also retains the advantage) 21...♖c7 22. 0–0 ♖xd6 23. exd6 ♖xc4 24. ♖a8 ♖b5 (24...♖xd4 25. ♖d1+–) 25. ♖a3! ♖d7 26. ♖c1, whilst 20...♗f6 would be answered by 21. ♕e2 ♕c6 22. ♖f4±.

21. ♕d3 (It is necessary to control the f5 square.) 21...f5

An attempt to activate the bishop with 21...♕c6 would fail miserably after 22. ♖f4 ♕xg2 23. ♖g1 ♕d5 24. ♖xg7.

22. ♖xb7 ♘e7

Here 22...♗f7 is no better: 23. ♖xb8 ♖xb8 24. ♖a7 ♗xd6 25. ♖xd7.

23. ♘e2 ♗f7 24. ♖xb8 ♖xb8 25. ♗xf7 ♖b2+ 26. ♘e3 ♘xf7 27. ♖a7 ♖d8 28. ♖c1

There are no saving chances in an endgame, and with a few precise blows I was able to force my opponent to capitulate.

28...g5 29. ♖cc7 ♘e7

29...♘e8 30. d5 exd5 31. e6+–.

30. d5 f4+ 31. ♘d4

Black resigned.

Game 44

Sveshnikov – Fominikh

Russian Championship, Elista 1996

1. e4 c5 2. ♗f3!

In my preparation I established that my opponent generally answered 2. c3 with 2...d5 3. exd5 ♖xd5 4. d4 ♗f6 5. ♗f3 ♕g4 whilst after 2. ♗f3 he played only 2...e6 or 2...♗c6. So it was clear to me that I should play 2. ♗f3! first.

2...♗c6

Black was obviously not attracted by the sharp line 2...e6 2. c3 d5 4. e5 d4, which entails a pawn sacrifice.

3. c3!

The exclamation mark is not for the objective strength of the move, but for its psychological subtlety: the strongest reply is 3...♗f6!, but my opponent does not play this! Furthermore, Black's second-strongest line 3...d5 4. exd5 ♖xd5 5. d4 can lead to complications because Black has played ...♗c6 so early, and Alexander was probably not prepared for these. On the other hand, based on my great experience with it, I am happy to play any line of the c3 Sicilian.

3...e6?!

In my opinion this is a serious concession in the opening: now instead of a Sicilian it will be a French.

4. d4 d5 5. e5!

The is definitely stronger than the anaemic 5. exd5 exd5!, after which White's advantage is merely symbolic.

5...♗d7 6. ♗e2 ♗ge7 7. ♗a3 ♗f5

The main line is considered to be 7...cxd4 8. cxd4 ♗f5 9. ♗c2 ♗b4 10. 0–0 ♗xc2 11. ♖xc2 ♖c8 12. ♖d3 ♖b6, but in this variation too I think I have been able to pose some problems for Black.

8. ♗c2 ♗e7 9. 0–0

9. ♗d3!? cxd4 10. ♗xf5 exf5 11. ♗cxd4±.

9...cxd4 10. cxd4 h5?!

Fortifying the knight's position at f5 like this is not without some drawbacks.

11. b4!

The only danger for White is if the opponent is able to castle queenside and then launch a counter-attack on the kingside (g5–g4 etc.), so it is important to seize the initiative on the opposite wing.

11...♖c8

This move looks natural but it does not interfere with my plan. Instead 11...g5!?± came into consideration.

12. ♖b1 a6 13. a4 ♖b6

After 13...♗a7 14. ♗e3 White is the more active on both wings.

14. b5 axb5 15. ♗xb5

The opposition of queen and rook is uncomfortable for Black; furthermore a new target has appeared – the b7 pawn.

15...♖c7 16. ♗e3!

A thematic move: it threatens to exchange on f5, which would considerably weaken Black's kingside.

16...♗xe3 17. ♗xe3 ♗a5

The only source of counterplay.

18. ♖g5!

Taking advantage of the first opportunity to exchange the bishops and take control of the g5 square.

18... ♗xb5 19. ♖xb5 ♘c4 20. h4 b6
21. ♗xe7

Here 21. ♗e2 ♗a8 22. ♗a1 would also be good; it is very hard for Black to gain any counterplay.

21... ♗xe7 22. ♘g5 ♗a8

The critical position. White has achieved a lot, but Black has also been able to create some counterplay against the a4 pawn. All in all though, my space advantage and the insecure position of the black king allow me to play for a win by playing on both wings.

23. ♖b3!

Beginning an attack on the f7 pawn.

23... ♗a7 24. ♗c2

Here 24. ♗e2!? to bring the other rook into play was also good.

24... ♗g6

The best chance lay in 24...f6! 25. exf6 gxf6, so as to answer 26. ♗g6+ with 26...♗d8!. I did not see this during the game and I would have had to be content with 26. ♗h3±.

25. ♖f3 ♖f8

But not 25...0–0 26. ♖f6 ♖fa8?! 27. ♗xe6 fxe6 28. ♗xg6+ ♗g7 29. ♗xh5±.

26. ♖b1

The last reserves are brought up.

26... ♗d7 27. ♖b4

The good knight on g5 is no weaker than the f8 rook, and the a4 pawn will have its say.

27... ♖c7 28. ♖c3

Now Black is unable to castle, so White can switch his attack to another target. This is where the space advantage comes in useful!

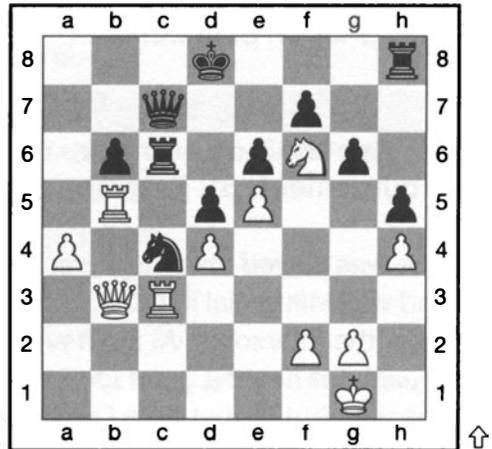

28... ♗d8

Seeking refuge on the queenside.

29. ♗h7 ♖h8 30. ♗f6 ♗e7

Despite the reduced material, Black's pieces are cramped.

31. ♗b3 ♖c6 32. ♖b5 ♗c7

33. a5!

The decisive breakthrough.

33... ♗c8

Obviously 33...bxa4? fails to 34. ♖b8+, but there is no salvation for Black, either in 33...♗xa5? 34. ♖xa5! ♖xc3 35. ♗a8+ ♗e7 36. ♗b4+ or 34...bxa5 35. ♖xc6 ♗xc6 36. ♗b8+ ♗e7 (36...♗c8 37. ♗d6+) 37. ♗xh8 ♗c1+ 38. ♗h2 ♗f4+ 39. ♗h3 ♗f5+ 40. ♗g3 ♗d3+ 41. f3 ♗b5 42. ♗c8 and 43. ♗g8#.

34. axb6 ♗b7 35. ♗e4! dxe4 36. ♖xc4 ♖xc4 37. ♗xc4+ ♗d7 38. ♗a5! ♖c8

38...♗xb6 39. ♗a4+. The rest is quite simple.

39. ♖b5+ ♗c6 40. ♝a7+ ♘d8 41. ♗xc6 ♝xc6 42. ♝a8+

Black resigned. In my opinion this game is extremely instructive:

- 1) To counter the threat to his f5 knight, Black weakened g5 by h7–h5;
- 2) By starting activity on the queenside, White discouraged Black from castling on that side;
- 3) The attack on the h5 and f7 pawns also discouraged kingside castling.
- 4) Making use of his space advantage and the disconnection of the black rooks, White switched the attack back to the queenside, where he landed the decisive blow.

Play on both wings

Game 45

Sveshnikov – Dreev

Zonal Tournament, St. Petersburg 1993

This game was played towards the end of the Zonal and was influential in the fight for qualification for the Interzonal. At such an important moment it is never a good idea to play a weak opening, but at that time Dreev played nothing but the French. These days he also plays the Caro-Kann, although 1...c6 is not the best move either. Incidentally, Bareev is in a similar position; both grandmasters err on the very first move. Thus their prospects in the fight for the world championship are zero. If a player has neither 1...e5 nor 1...c5 in his repertoire, sooner or later he ends up in an impasse.

Any player who aspires to the highest level should answer 1. e4 with 1...c5. It is said that it is impossible to become world champion without a mastery of the Ruy Lopez; I would add that it is equally impossible without the Sicilian. You should play the Lopez with White and the Sicilian with Black! I think that one of the reasons why Keres never became world champion was that Paul Petrovich mainly played 1...e5, which is not an adequate solution to the problems of the opening.

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5 c5 4. c3 ♖c6

In my preparation I studied the variation with 4...♗b6 and 5...♙d7, as Dreev played against Igor Zaitsev in Protvino 1990. Black has problems in this line, e.g.: 4...♗b6 5. ♖f3 ♙d7 6. a3 cxd4 (or 6...♙b5 7. c4!) 7. cxd4 ♙b5 8. ♙xb5+ ♗xb5 9. ♖c3 ♗a6 10. ♖e2 followed by castling kingside and play on both wings (Sveshnikov – Gurgendze, Volgodosk 1981).

5. ♖f3 ♙d7

Many play this, but 5...♗b6 is better, and if 6. a3 – 6...c4! with complex play; but positions with pawn chains are not to everybody's taste.

6. ♙e2 ♖ge7

The alternative is 6...f6, attacking the e5 pawn.

7. ♖a3 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♖f5 9. ♖c2 ♖b4

Here 9...♗a5+ does not equalise after 10. ♙d2 ♗b6 11. ♙c3 (Sveshnikov – Psakhis, Sochi 1987).

10. 0–0

This move is clearly stronger than 10. ♖e3, as Spassky played in his match against Korchnoi (Belgrade 1977, Volume 2, game 15 on page 19).

10...♖xc2 11. ♗xc2 h5?!

A novelty, but not a good one. Normally 11...♗b6 12. ♗d3 is played, with a small but stable advantage for White (Sveshnikov – Zlotnik, Moscow 1991), or 11...♝c8 12. ♗d3 ♗b6 (12...a6 13. ♗b3±) 13. a4± (13. g4!?).

12. ♙d2!

A multi-purpose move which keeps open the possibility of developing activity on both wings.

12...♙e7 13. ♙d3!

White must stay alert, since if 13. ♖fc1 Black can be first to seize the initiative with 13...g5!.

13...♗b6?

This is already a clear error. Instead, 13...g5 was better, with a sharp game in which White, in my opinion, retains the better chances, e. g.: 14. ♕xf5 exf5 15. ♗b3 ♕c6 (15...g4 16. e6 ♕xe6 17. ♖e5 ♖) 16. e6±. The alternative 14. ♕c3 is not bad either: 14...g4 15. ♖e1 ♗b6 (15...♖h4 16. g3 ♖f5 17. ♖g2 h4 18. ♗e2±) 16. ♕xf5 exf5 17. ♕d3±.

The combination of the moves 11...h5, 12...♕e7 and 13...♗b6 cannot be recommended, since the g5 square is weakened.

14. ♕xf5 exf5 15. ♕g5

Obviously White grasps the opportunity to exchange the dark-squared bishops.

15...♕xg5

After thinking for over half an hour, Dreev makes what is probably the best decision – at least to have an extra pawn as compensation for his bad position.

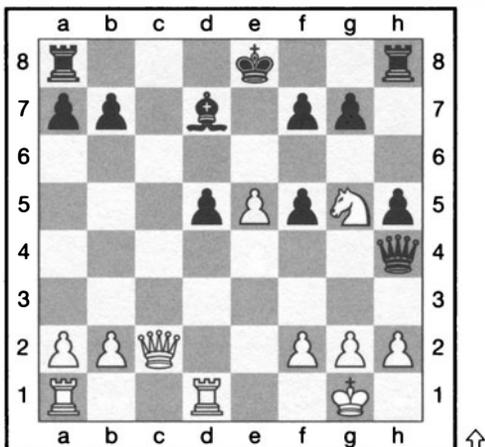

16. ♖xg5 ♗xd4

Otherwise Black is just worse.

17. ♖fd1

Also possible is 17. ♖ad1, but I wanted to use this rook on the c-file in the variation 17...♗a4 18. b3 ♗c6.

17...♗h4

A dubious decision; it was better to return the pawn with 17...♗b6, although after 18. ♕xd5 ♕c6 19. ♕d6 with the idea of ♗e2, White is clearly better.

18. ♗d2!

My opponent apparently missed this very strong move.

18...♗c4

Faced with the unpleasant threat of 19. f4!, the queen must go back.

19. ♖ac1 ♗b5

The only move. 19...♗xa2 fails to 20. ♖c7 ♖d8 21. e6! fxe6 22. ♖xe6! ♕xe6 23. ♗g5 and White wins.

20. a4!

The computer quickly finds this move, but at the board I had to spend time calculating the variations.

20...♗b3

If 20...♗xa4 or 20...♗b6 White wins with the simple 21. ♗xd5.

21. ♖c3 ♗b6

21...♗a2 22. ♖c7±.

22. ♗xd5 0–0!

There will not be another opportunity.

23. a5

Here 23. ♗xd7 is not possible because of 23...♖ad8, since the rook on d1 is unprotected.

23...♗xb2?

In time pressure (he had to conduct a difficult defence for the whole game) Dreev makes a fatal error. Of course, in the variation 23...♗g6 24. ♗xd7 ♗xg5 25. ♗xb7 White has an extra pawn, but he would need to overcome some technical difficulties to convert his advantage.

24. ♗f3!

This move wins the game (this is where the weakness of the h5 pawn tells!) – apparently Black overlooked it.

24...g6 25. ♖xd7 ♜ac8 26. ♖xc8 ♖xc8
27. ♖d1 ♖c1 28. ♗d5 ♖xd1+

The mate threat forces Black to exchange rooks.

29. ♗xd1 ♗xe5 30. ♗d8+ ♔g7
31. ♗h8+!

This exchanging combination in the style of Petrosian is the simplest way to win.

31...♔xh8 32. ♕xf7+ ♔g7 33. ♕xe5
♔f6 34. f4 g5 35. ♔f2 gxf4 36. ♕d3 b5
37. ♕xf4 h4 38. ♔e3 ♔e5 39. ♕g6+

Black resigned.

Game 46

Sveshnikov – M. Gurevich
Ekaterinburg 2002

1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5

Mikhail Gurevich is regarded as one of the foremost specialists in the French Defence for Black. Not long ago he played a “thematic match” against Sasha Grischuk with the 3. e5 variation. Many other grandmasters are influenced by Mikhail’s play, so it was particularly interesting for me to play against an expert like him.

3...c5 4. c3 ♖c6

This was already a surprise. In the most recent games of his that I was familiar with, Mikhail had employed the variation with ♗b6 and ♕d7 etc. However, this was only relatively surprising, since Gurevich had also used 4...♕c6 quite often. At the Dubai 2002 tournament I managed to gain an advantage in the opening against grandmaster Sergey Volkov after 4...♗b6 5. ♕f3 ♕d7 6. a3 a5 (the latest fashion, although White has not yet been able to demonstrate a clear advantage against 6...♕b5!?) 7. ♕e2 a4 8. 0–0 ♕c6 9. ♕d3 ♕a5 10. ♕c2 ♕c4 11. ♕g5!? cxd4 (11...♕e7 was to be considered) 12. cxd4 ♕xb2 13. ♗f3 ♕h6 14. ♕c3

♕c4 (14...♗xd4!? 15. ♕xb2 ♗d2 16. ♕xa4 ♕xa4 17. ♕xa4 ♗xg5 18. ♗b3 ♕e7 19. ♗b5+ ♔f8 20. ♗xb7±) 15. ♖d1. Mikhail avoids these variations.

5. ♕f3 ♕d7 6. ♕e2

For the present I am not trying to show anything new in my system, since I am happy with the current theory. It is from Black that I am expecting to see something new ...

6...♕ge7

Another possibility is 6...f6, as Gulko, Psakhis, Vaisser and others have played against me, although I have usually managed to gain an advantage.

7. ♕a3 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♕f5 9. ♕c2

Here 9. 0–0 is interesting, not fearing the doubling of the a-pawns, since in return White acquires some important trumps: two bishops and the half-open b-file.

9...♕b4

All this has been known since the game Spassky – Korchnoi (Belgrade 1977), which continued 10. ♕e3 ♕xe3 11. fxe3 ♕e7 12. a3 ♕c6 with complicated play (Volume 2, game 15 on page 19).

10. 0–0

It seems to me that in 10. 0–0 ♕xc2 11. ♗xc2 ♗b6 13. ♗d3 I have hit upon a good new set-up for White, which has given me good results. However, my opponent had prepared something new ...

10...♕a4?!

The advantage of this move is obvious: White is forced to play b2–b3, after which the b3 square is unavailable to the white queen and in addition the c3 square is weakened, so that in the future White will have to worry about its defence. But the disadvantages are also clear: Black loses at least one tempo and, although in the French Advance the play does not develop very quickly, a tempo is definitely worth something!

11. b3

Before I made this forced move I thought for about ten minutes, since I wanted to understand what my opponent had in mind.

11... ♖d7 12. ♘e3 a5 13. a3

Otherwise 13...a4 is unpleasant.

13... ♘c6 14. ♖b2

Of course I really wanted to keep this bishop on its “natural” operating diagonal, c1–h6, but in order to be able to transfer the other bishop to an active post at d3 I first have to defend the d4 pawn.

14... ♗e7 15. ♗d3 g6?

A typical error! Even Botvinnik himself once made a similar mistake. The simple 15... ♘e3 16. fxe3 0–0 was to be considered, when the white position is slightly better but Black has equalising chances. Now White achieves more.

16. ♗d2 ♗b6

Now the capture 16... ♘e3 is unconvincing, since White replies 17. ♗xe3, and the weakness of the kingside dark squares will be felt.

17. ♖c2!

It was not easy to decide on this move, since it loses time, but g7–g6 has created strategic weaknesses in Black’s position, so White does not need to hurry, especially since Black has difficulty deciding what to do with his king.

17...h5

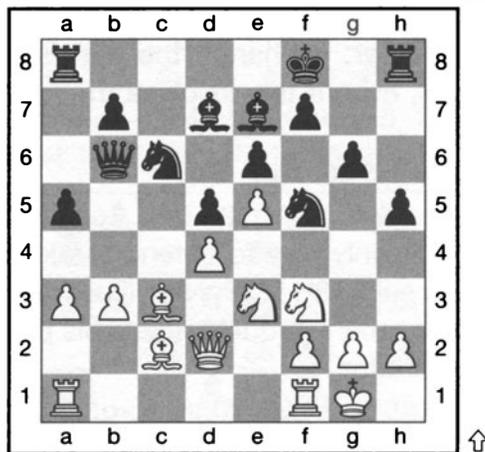

A thematic move, preventing g2–g4, but in reality it just creates another weakness.

18. ♖c3!

Emphasising that the black king will not be able to find a safe haven on the queenside.

18... ♖f8

It is hard to suggest another plan. But now that Black has committed his king White abruptly alters the pattern of play.

19. ♖xf5!

A typical exchange in this kind of structure. On this theme, see also the game Sveshnikov – Ortega, Sochi 1987 in the chapter on Blockade (game 64 on page 122).

19...gxf5 20. g3!

I am awarding my moves a lot of exclamation marks, but I just want to emphasise that White’s last few moves are links in the same chain.

20... ♖g8

If 20...h4!? White had the choice between 21. ♖g2 and 21. g×h4. I would probably have chosen the latter, followed by ♖h1 and an attack on the g-file.

21. ♖g2 ♗d8 22. ♖f1

The immediate 22. b4 came into consideration, but I was interested to find out what Black was going to do if I bided my time. I could see no play for my opponent.

22... ♗f8 23. b4 a×b4 24. a×b4 ♖a7

If 24...♖xa1 25. ♖xa1 ♘xb4, White can choose between 26. ♗xb4 ♗xb4 27. ♖g5+ ♘h7 (here 27...♖g7 28. ♖d8+ ♘h7 29. ♖xd7 is bad) 28. ♖xh5+ ♘g8 29. ♖g5+ ♘h7 30. ♖e3± and the simple 26. ♖b1! ♘c6 27. ♖xb7 ♖c8 28. ♖b1 with a clear advantage.

25. ♖d1

Reminding Black about the weakness of his h5 pawn and also preparing to transfer the bishop to its operational diagonal. White's task is clear: exchange the dark-squared bishops, even if this involves the loss of a pawn.

25...♗b5 26. ♗d2 ♘c6

Here 26...♗d3 fails to 27. ♖b3 ♗e4 28. ♖ba3, when the only way to defend the knight is the awkward 28...♖b8. Now it appears that Black has managed to activate his pieces a little, but after ...

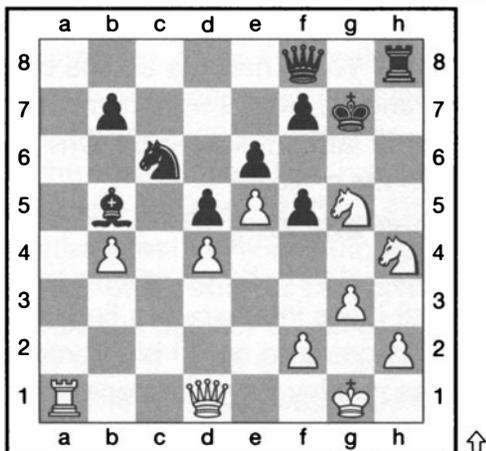

27. ♗g5 ♖xa1 28. ♖xa1 ♗xg5 29. ♘xg5

White has succeeded in carrying out his strategic plan, and a great many weaknesses have been created in Black's position.

29...h4

Not a move that Black will have enjoyed playing, but he is trying – at the cost of a pawn – to create at least some basis for counterplay. Instead 29...♖xb4 30. ♖a8+ ♘g7 31. ♖xh8 ♘xh8 fails to 32. ♖xh5+, mating, whilst 29...♘xb4 30. ♘f4 leaves the black king completely unprotected.

30. ♘xh4 ♘g7

But here I went wrong. I had forty minutes left to my opponent's twenty, and with an extra pawn and a big positional advantage, thinking that the game was effectively over, I relaxed.

31. ♘g2?!

The accurate move 31. ♖d2 would have brought Black to the edge of defeat. The simple 31. ♖b1 was not bad either.

31...♖xb4 32. ♘f4 ♗a6 33. h4

Obviously stronger was 33. ♖b1 ♖c3 34. ♘f3 with a small advantage to White.

33...♖h6

The best defence! Now a knight manoeuvring to f6 is less dangerous; also the e6 pawn is defended.

34. ♘f3

White's misfortune is not so much that he has lost the b4 pawn, as that now Black is able to attack the d4 pawn.

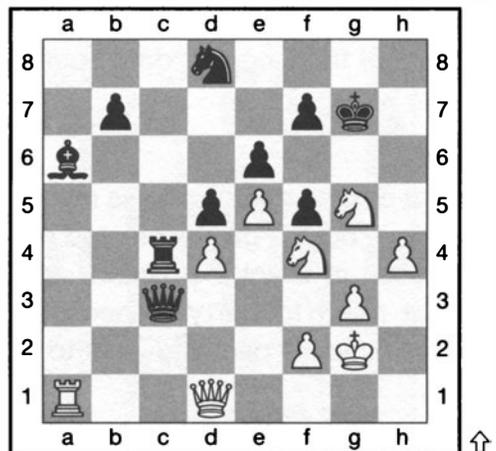

34...♖h8! 35. ♖b1 ♖c3 36. ♖b3 ♖c4 37. ♖a3

Here 37. ♖b6!/? came into consideration.

37...♖c8 38. ♖a1

White played the last few moves up to the time control planlessly; I was annoyed at the missed opportunities. Gurevich, meanwhile, consolidated his position.

38...♘d8 39. ♘g5 ♖c3 40. ♘g2 ♖c4?

41. ♖e2?

The time control has been reached. I thought that I had let the win slip and my attention was focused on defence. Later the computer indicated a forced win beginning 41. ♖h5+!! ♜f8 42. ♖f6, and now neither 42...♜e7 nor 42...♞xd4 43. ♞h5 saves Black. The strange thing is that this simple solution just did not occur to me during the game, yet it would have been the logical culmination of all my previous play! Of course, 40...♞c4 was a blunder, but if White still had such a possibility it shows that my position still held the promise of a big advantage.

In the game, after

41...♞b2 42. ♞b1 ♞a2 43. ♞a1 ♞b2 44. ♞b1 ♞a2

a draw was agreed. I did not play 45. ♞c1, since now White can play for a win only at great risk.

Conclusions: a convincing advantage for White in the opening, good play in the middlegame (note the typical exchange 19. ♜xf5!) and very slack play in the fourth hour. It is a pity that I did not take advantage of my opponent's blunder with 40...♞c4?. I think that I was affected by tiredness after seven tough games against strong players in the previous rounds of the Russian Team Championship.

16...0–0 17. ♜d2 ♜a8!

A very interesting and original idea. Black wants to transfer his king's rook to the queenside to b8 and then prepare the pawn advance b7–b5–b4.

In recent years Victor Lvovich Korchnoi has become one of the most important specialists in the French with 3. e5. He fought against this system for many years with the black pieces and then began playing it with White as well. Still, I dare say Peng Xiaomin's play can be improved upon. Thus instead of 15. ♖g1 White could consider 15. h4!? a5 16. b5 ♘a7 17. ♚b3± ♝c8 18. ♙d3 or 18...♝xc8 ♜xc8 19. ♜c5 ♚c7 20. ♜xd7 ♝xd7±. I think that theory will develop in this direction.

The moves 11... ♗c8, 11... a5 and 11... ♖g6 also come into consideration.

12. h3!?

The essence of White's plan here is to keep control of the square f5. Of course Black can open the h-file, but how can he attack with just his rook?! It is quite unclear who will benefit from the opening of the file. My judgement is that White's chances are better.

12...h×g4 13. h×g4 f6

If 13... f5!? then 14. ♖g5! is unpleasant for Black (but not 14. g5?! ♖g6, when he is in good shape – his king will be comfortable in the centre) e. g. 14... f×g4 (14... ♗h4!?) 15. ♗×g4 ♖d8 16. ♖g2±. 15. b4

Thanks to his space advantage, White can easily transfer pieces to the queenside, so his attack will have a good chance of success. After the opening of the h-file Shirov induced his opponent to castle queenside in order to start an attack on the kingside, but this plan is too slow.

15... ♖×d4?

One of the disadvantages for White of the exchange on a3 is revealed: the knight cannot be ejected from c4 and exchanging it is unfavourable, since then the c6 bishop would be activated, and the d5 square would become available to Black's knight or queen. However, for the moment the c4 knight is not causing White any particular problems.

15. ♟h4!

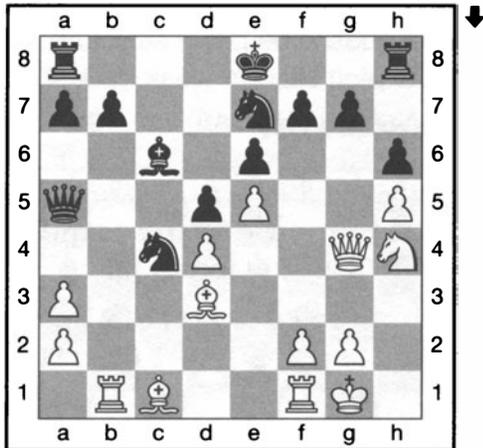

White prepares an attack on the kingside (f2–f4–f5, ♚g4) and at the same time prevents the other black knight from taking up a good position at f5.

16...♔d7

Queenside castling is not possible because the king needs to protect the e7 knight (see the note to White's 17th). If 16...♔d2!? White reaches a promising position with 17. ♖xg7 ♖g8 18. ♖xh6! (18. ♔xd2 ♖xd2 19. ♖h7 ♖f4 =) 18...♔xb1 19. ♔xb1 (Notkin). And it will rarely be good for Black to capture on a3; the pawn will not play an important role for a long time to come, whereas the square a3 might well become useful for the white bishop.

17. ♖b4

White prevents counterplay with ♔d2 and ♖c3 and attacks the knight c4 one more time, just in case. Now he is threatening to capture on g7, which is not so strong immediately because of 17. ♖xg7 ♖ag8 18. ♖f6 (18. ♖xf7 ♖f8 19. ♖g7 ♖fg8=) 18...♖c3±.

A pawn weakness has appeared in the black position at e6 and White immediately takes aim at it.

20...♔d6

Black does not have time to play 20...f5 (with the plan of transferring a knight to e4) because of 21. ♖e1.

21. f5!±

It is important not to let Black set up the defensive structure mentioned in the previous note.

21...exf5

Notkin's suggestion 21...♔e4!? can be met by the very unpleasant 22. fxe6+ ♔xe6 23. ♔g6! e.g.: 23...♔xg6 24. hxg6 ♖d8 (24...♖xg6 25. ♖h5+-) 25. ♔xe4 dxe4 26. ♖g4+ ♔e7 27. ♖f5 ♔e8 28. d5 ♖xd5 29. ♖xf6 e3 30. ♖f7+ ♔d8 31. ♖xd5+ ♔xd5 32. ♖d1+-.

22. ♔xf5 ♔exf5 (22...♔e4 23. ♖f3) 23. ♔xf5+ ♔xf5 24. ♖xf5

Black's position leaves a lot to be desired: he has an unsafe king, a bad bishop and weak pawns. Furthermore there are bishops of opposite colours, which will make White's attack all the stronger.

24...♖d8 25. ♖b3

White brings into play his only inactive piece.

25...♖h7

25...♖e8 26. ♖g4! (26. ♖f2!?) 26...♖e6 27. ♔xh6!.

26. ♖f3

Here White could have played conceptually with 26. ♖f1, so as to arrange his heavy pieces by the book: the rooks in front, the queen behind. Grischuk probably decided that it would be good to target the d5 pawn; it might become possible to sacrifice the exchange and shatter Black's position.

26...♞e8?

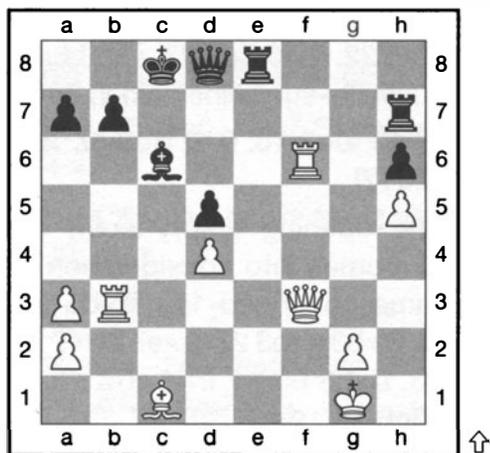

White's calculation is justified – this move makes an elegant finish possible. More stubborn would be 26...♞hg7 27. ♞b2 ♖a5 (Notkin), but here too White would have good winning chances with 28. ♞e2 or 28. ♙xh6!?

27. ♞xf6!

It becomes clear that the check on e1 can be ignored.

A fine win by Lputian and one of Grischuk's rare defeats with this system.

How could Lputian win with Black against someone who is currently an objectively stronger player? My friend Smbat and I played more than ten training games with the 3. e5 French, of which he won the majority. We have also played countless blitz games, so Lputian has enormous experience with and a good feel for these positions. Hence Grischuk did not manage to gain any advantage out of the opening. Through inertia, he continued playing for a win and missed the moment when he had to try to make a draw.

I always look with special interest at Lputian's games, since I do not know of any other player who handles so well with Black the positions in the 3. e5 system where White plays the bayonet attack g2–g4. Short is a fine attacking player with a good feeling for the initiative. So here we have a game between two real experts; it is a very interesting one, full of tactical and strategic finesses.

Play on both wings

Game 54 Bronstein – Mestel

England – USSR, London 1976

A very instructive game. I admire the purity with which Bronstein carries out his strategic ideas. White has two methods of playing on both wings. We have already discussed the first method, when White creates weaknesses in the enemy's kingside and then later shifts the weight of the struggle to the queenside. In this game Bronstein demonstrates another method of playing on both wings: on the queenside, where White is weaker, he is content to defend (with the minimum of forces), he deprives the opponent of counterplay and then he takes the offensive with f4–f5, opening the f-file.

Generally, such model games arise between players of widely differing strength. In the mid-seventies Mestel was one of the strongest English grandmasters. David Ionovich's creative achievement is therefore all the more praiseworthy.

The b3 bishop is actually out of the game, so that White is practically playing with an extra piece. Now any exchange on the f-file is advantageous for White. The only requirement is to control the c2 square, to prevent the bishop transferring to its operational diagonal (b1–h7).

A crystal-clear illustrative game: White defended on the queenside and attacked on the kingside.

In Chapter 1 “Theoretically important games for independent analysis”, on page 11 in Volume 2, special attention should be given to the encounters Sveshnikov – Brumen, Bled 2000 (Volume 2, game 56 on page 48) and Sveshnikov – Dizdar, Bled 2002 (Volume 2, game 57 on page 49).

Conclusions: we can say that when the play is on both wings, the advantage is more often than not with White, since, thanks to his space advantage, it is easier for him to regroup his pieces.

Chapter 3

The many facets of the blockade

3.1 Aaron Nimzowitsch: theoretician, practical player and romantic

Having worked with children for quite a long time, I am constantly thinking about new lessons. For many years I have wanted to write an article about blockade, since this theme is important to me, and has cropped up in dozens of my games. But it is not possible to discuss blockade without mentioning the man who was the first to give it a theoretical basis and to explain it – Aaron Nimzowitsch.

The future great chess player was born in Riga in the same year, 1886, as that in which Wilhelm Steinitz became the first official world champion in history. Eight year old Aaron was introduced to chess by his father. In 1902 the young man set off to study in Germany and it was there that childhood enthusiasm grew into a real love. Nimzowitsch played constantly in all sorts of competitions, first of all in club events and then in international tournaments. By 1906 he had already achieved his first major success by winning first prize in a strong tournament in Munich (ahead of Rudolf Spielmann!).

The years of the First World War and the Russian Revolution undoubtedly influenced Nimzowitsch's fate. It is not known for certain what he did between 1914 and 1920. Only when he left Riga in the spring of 1920, first for Sweden, and then for Copenhagen, did he return to active chess playing. The peak of Nimzowitsch's sporting career falls in the 20s and the beginning of the 30s. Here are some of his results: 1923 Copenhagen 1st place; 1925 Marienbad sharing 1st and 2nd place; 1926 Dresden 1st, Hannover 1st; 1927 London 1st; 1928 Berlin 1st; 1929 Carlsbad 1st; 1930 Frankfurt am Main 1st; 1933 Copenhagen sharing 1st and 2nd. After his victory in Carlsbad and 2nd place in the tournament in San Remo (1930) the chess world began to talk about organising a match for the crown between Nimzowitsch and Alexander Alekhine. Alas, in the path of the pretender there rose “a golden barrier” – a prize fund of $10,000 – which he was not able to overcome.

What a pity! ... At that stage Nimzowitsch's results could have been the envy even of a world champion. In games against Efim Bogoljubow, who played two matches for the world championship with Alekhine, he scored 4/5. In games with the future world champion Max Euwe – 1½/2, with Salo Flohr – 2½/3.

In the meantime we remember Aaron Nimzowitsch not only because of his sporting results but also for his scientific and creative contribution, and for his selfless love and devotion to chess.

This is what the Swedish grandmaster Gideon Ståhlberg wrote in his memoirs (Chess and Chessmasters): “... Few masters – perhaps none – were so fond of the game of chess as Nimzowitsch. ... Chess was the great interest of his life, not because it became his profession, but because from his childhood onwards he cherished it more than anything else”. The famous English master and chess author Harry Golombek included Nimzowitsch among the chess romantics. Innovative ideas were his principal bequest to the chess world.

While Alekhine possessed colossal practical strength and absorbed ideas from other chess players like a sponge, basing whole systems and variations on these ideas (in this respect Garry Kasparov is similar to him), Nimzowitsch thought for himself. From his pen issued such remarkable textbooks as Blockade, My System, My System in Practice, and How I became a Grandmaster.

No less important is Nimzowitsch's contribution to chess opening theory. “It is difficult to name another chess player who had a comparable influence on our contemporaries”, – Harry Golombek.

Here are the most important of them: the Nimzo-Indian Defence – 1. d4 ♖f6 2. c4 e6 3. ♗c3 ♗b4; in the Queen's Indian Defence, after 1. d4 ♖f6 2. c4 e6 3. ♗f3 b6 4. g3 the move 4... ♗a6; in the French Defence, 1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. ♗c3 ♗b4 for Black and 1. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5! for White. In addition there is the variation 1. e4 c5 2. ♗f3 ♗c6 3. ♗b5! (Nimzowitsch's punctuation!) in the Sicilian defence, a line which is gaining ever more attention from contemporary grandmasters. For Black 1. e4 c5 2. ♗f3 ♗f6?! (my punctuation, E. S.). In the Caro-Kann Defence: 1. e4 c6 2. d4 d5 3. exd5 cxd5 4. c4 – this variation was played by Alekhine and Botvinnik. There were also some dubious opening ideas for example 1. e4 ♗c6 or the Nimzowitsch opening 1. b3.

I don't think I have a right to change anything of what Nimzowitsch wrote about the blockade, if only because it is impossible to put it better!

“I have succeeded in finding the theoretical basis of the rule which explains why it is necessary to block passed pawns.

“The important question is this: is it sufficient to impede the advance of the d5 pawn with the arrangement of pieces shown in the diagram (♞b3 and ♗f2), or should it be physically restrained by placing the knight on d4? Answer: in view of the tremendous mobility of the passed pawn, mild measures such as impeding its advance through the influence of pieces posted at a distance are inadequate, because the pawn could move forward anyway, even at the cost of its life.

“1...d4 2. ♗xd4 (or 2. ♞xd4). Now the black pieces standing behind the pawn suddenly come to life: the bishop commands a diagonal pointing towards the enemy king, the rook gets an open file and the knight a new central square. Accordingly the blockade is logically justified by the fact that the passed pawn is (as I jokingly put it) like a criminal, one who is so dangerous that placing it under police surveillance (by the knight on b3 and the bishop on f2) is inadequate; no, it must be put in jail, completely deprived of its liberty by means of a blockade by the knight on d4.

“It might be thought that blockading the pawn has a purely “local” significance, and is thus a spatially limited exception: a pawn which wanted to advance is immobilised; so only the pawn suffers, nothing else. However, such an understanding is superficial. In reality, a whole complex of enemy pieces suffers, whole areas of the board are barred to manoeuvres and sometimes the entire enemy position can find itself constricted; in other words, the paralysis of the blockaded pawn spreads to the forces in the rear”.

In order to paint a fuller picture of Nimzowitsch I shall cite what several of his colleagues (famous chess players) had to say about him.

“Nimzowitsch is an eternal thinker and an engine of chess history. His restless mind will never make peace with the statement that the truth has been found ... He is an individualist and so it is easy for him to find himself in opposition to Réti, just as he was once in opposition to the conservative methods of the German school (Tarrasch). He cannot be considered a man of his time. His task is to reflect the future ...” (Pyotr Romanovsky, 1925).

“Bent Larsen and Tigran Petrosian, chess players moving in opposite creative directions, both present themselves as followers of Nimzowitsch ... After all there was a time when such concepts as centralisation, prophylaxis, overprotection, blockade and others were only the recipes of the eccentric Nimzowitsch. Today general acceptance of these ideas has made them seem almost banal. Previously these recipes were thought of only as quirks of Nimzowitsch’s individual approach to chess; now they are being taught. And they are nothing special – they are even very simple. Revelations, flashes of illumination, discoveries, which are only accessible to brilliant individuals, are precious - precisely because they become public property. And they allow the next genius to begin from a new level”. (Mikhail Tal, 1974)

Everybody accepts the fact that Tal, Fischer, Karpov and Kasparov are geniuses, but only Tal dared to say that Nimzowitsch was a genius. That is how much he valued Nimzowitsch’s contribution to chess!

3.2 The classical blockade

Many games by Aaron Nimzowitsch have rightly entered the treasury of chess art. In my view the game with Salwe beautifully demonstrates the plan of giving up a pawn centre and then blockading the vacated central squares with one's own pieces.

Game 55

Nimzowitsch – Salwe

Carlsbad 1911

*French Defence C021. e4 e6 2. d4 d5 3. e5(!)

Creating the famous “pawn chain”.

3...c5 4. c3

In the 1920s Nimzowitsch thought up and successfully adopted the plan with 4. ♖g4?!

4...♟c6 5. ♟f3 ♖b6 6. ♟d3 ♟d7?

A serious opening mistake. More accurate is 6...cxd4! 7. cxd4 and only now 7...♟d7.

7. dxc5!

Today this move is considered normal and natural, but at that time, almost a hundred years ago, it was a revelation: to give up the centre, and for what – for an ephemeral opportunity to occupy the liberated square d4 with one's own pieces! This is what grandmaster Milan Vidmar wrote about this move: “After 6...♟d7 even the artificial 7. dxc5 is possible, which, however, gives White a good game”.

In general, Nimzowitsch's play in this game was so revolutionary that at first it attracted very little praise. Very few critics could appreciate the beauty of his ideas at their true value. For the move 7. dxc5, one of the deepest ever made on the chess board, Nimzowitsch was universally condemned!

7...♟xc5 8. 0-0 f6?

8...a5 came into consideration.

9. b4! ♟e7 10. ♟f4 fxе5?

Here 10...♟h6 would have been better.

11. ♟xe5 ♟xe5 12. ♟xe5 ♟f6

If 12...♟f6, then 13. ♖h5+ g6 14. ♟xg6+ hxg6 15. ♖xg6+ ♟e7 16. ♟xf6+ ♟xf6 17. ♖g7+ and ♖xf6 (Nimzowitsch).

13. ♟d2 0-0 14. ♟f3

The knight, the e5 bishop, and the c3 pawn all participate in an immediate blockade of the central points d4 and e5. Now it is the turn of other white pieces – queen and rook.

14...♟d6

On 14...♟b5 Nimzowitsch gives the variation 15. ♟d4 ♖a6 16. ♟xb5 ♖xb5 17. ♟g5 ♖c6 18. ♖e1 with an advantage. But slightly better is 14...♟g4 15. ♟g3 (if 15. ♟d4, then 15...♖c7 16. h3 – against the threat of 16...♖xf3 – 16...♖xf3 17. hxg4 ♖f7; of course White has an advantage but Black can defend) 15...♟f6 (15...♟d6? 16. ♟xh7+! ♟xh7 17. ♟g5+) 16. h3 ♟h6 17. ♟e5 ♟f7 18. ♟xf6 gxh6 19. c4! – Black's position is difficult.

15. ♖e2! ♖ac8 16. ♟d4! ♖c7 17. ♟e5!

Notice how elegantly the bishop on e5 gave way to the knight. The blockade is consolidated and the two squares are already occupied by white pieces. Everything is so clear that is hardly necessary to add any exclamation marks.

17...♟e8 18. ♖ae1!

These two games are beautiful examples of blockade, which I propose to call “classical”. Of course the blockade existed even before Nimzowitsch and, for example, the move $dxc5$ in the French Defence was used by Steinitz. Many people have intuitively used this method even without reading books about blockade. For example, I have found some decent games of my own in which I made use of blockade, played when I was just a second category player. But when I was preparing to teach some children I read Nimzowitsch again and reflected upon this theme, and my own tournament results improved.

Game 57

Sveshnikov – Razuvaev

Belgrade 1988

French Defence C02

Yuri Razuvaev and I have been facing each other over the chessboard for many years. When I am Black it is usually a Catalan or some sort of Queen’s Gambit; when I am White, it is invariably a 3. $e5$ French. Our adherence to our opening principles develops the theory. At the same time interesting psychological situations arise, like in a match.

1. $e4$ $c5$ 2. $c3$ $e6$ 3. $d4$ $d5$ 4. $e5$ dxc6

Since the $f6$ square is unavailable, Black sometimes chooses the setup with 4... dxe7 and 5... dxc6 . For examples see the games Sveshnikov – Kovačević, Belgrade 1988 (game [1] on page 118), Sveshnikov – Lputian, Moscow 1989 (game 37 on page 69) and Kupreichik – Kovačević, Ljubljana/Portorož 1989 (game [2] on page 118). Black can also exchange the light-squared bishops with 4... b6 , 5... d7 and 6... b5 – see Sveshnikov – Ehlvest, Leningrad 1984 (game [3] on page 118), as well as games by Igor Zaitsev.

5. f3 d7

Our previous games went the same way. Although I often obtained promising positions,

I did not manage to win a single game, and in Sochi 1986 I even lost one. So for this game I prepared long and hard. I noticed that in a game against Kaidanov (Dubna 1979), Razuvaev had answered

6. $\text{d3}!$?

... with 6... $\text{f6}?!$. That meant that he was not prepared to win the pawn. Furthermore, he had no taste for defence, preferring positions with clear counterplay. Without doubt the strongest line for Black here is 6... cxd4 7. cxd4 b6 8. dxc3 dxd4 , but this requires an excellent knowledge of concrete variations. I studied this line in 1987/88 and also played a few tournament games with it in minor competitions to gain a good grasp of the position. White can also play 6. e2 , 6. a3 or 6. dxc5 .

6... cxd4

This is more accurate than 6... $\text{b6}?!$, since then White has another possibility – 7. dxc5 dxc5 8. 0-0 (8. $\text{b4}!$? xf2+ 9. e2 is unclear) 8... a5 9. a4 , followed by a3 .

7. cxd4 b6

7... b4 8. $\text{e2}\pm$.

8. dxc3 dxd4 9. dxd4 bxd4 10. 0-0

If White does not wish to offer the second pawn, he can play 10. $\text{e2}!$?

10... a6

I can honestly say that I had no doubt that my opponent would limit himself to one pawn, even though the variations 10... $\text{xe5}!$? 11. e1 d6 (or 11... b8 12. dxd5 d6) 12. b5 b6 13. e3 a5 14. d2 b6 come into consideration for Black.

11. e2 d7

11... $\text{g6}!$? and 11... a7 have also been played.

12. h1

A necessary move, since White cannot get by without f2-f4 .

12... dxc6 13. f4 d4

13...♔c5.

14. ♖d1!

14. ♔b1 ♜c4 is better for Black.

14...♞xd3 15. ♞xd3 ♜c4?!

Some preliminary conclusions can already be drawn, even though I was still in my preparation. White had used ten minutes to Black's one hour and ten minutes; the time limit was forty moves in two hours each. Furthermore, I think Black has already made his first mistake; he should have played 15...♜b6 16. ♔e3 ♔c5! 17. ♔xc5 ♜xc5 18. f5!? when White has enough initiative for the pawn, but not more.

16. b3!

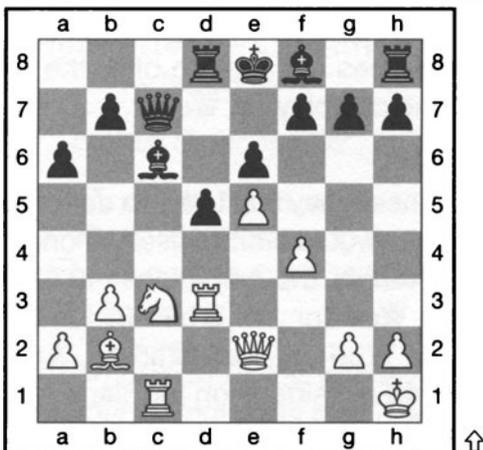

16. ♔e3 ♔b4! or 16...♔c5.

16...♜c7 17. ♔b2 ♔c6

This was the first new move as far as I was concerned. In a game of Glek's there occurred 17...♞c8 18. f5!, and White developed a dangerous attack.

18. ♞c1 ♞d8

If 18...♔e7 then 19. f5! is unpleasant, whilst now 19. f5 would be answered by 19...d4.

19. ♜f2!

A typical manoeuvre in such positions, already seen in my games. Not only does it prepare to transfer the queen to the kingside, but it also vacates the e2 square so that the knight can go to d4.

19...♔e7

After 19...d4 20. ♞e2! ♜b6 (20...♜a5 21. ♞xd4) 21. ♞xd4 White keep the advantage.

20. ♞e2 0-0 21. ♞d4

The development of the pieces is thus completed; for the pawn, White has the strong d4 square. As well as the possibility of regaining the pawn on c6 and later conquering the c-file, White has an even stronger plan available: a kingside attack by f4-f5.

21...♜d7 22. f5 exf5

22...♔g5? fails to 23. f6 ♔xc1 24. ♔xc1, and Black has no pieces capable of defending his king.

23. ♞g3!

A strong move instead of the small-minded 23. ♞xf5, when by 23...d4! (returning the pawn to open lines for the bishop and rook) 24. ♞xd4 ♜e6 Black would gain counterplay.

23...g6

23...♔h4 obviously fails to 24. ♞xg7+ ♔xg7 25. ♜xh4 with a winning attack on the dark squares.

24. ♜f4!

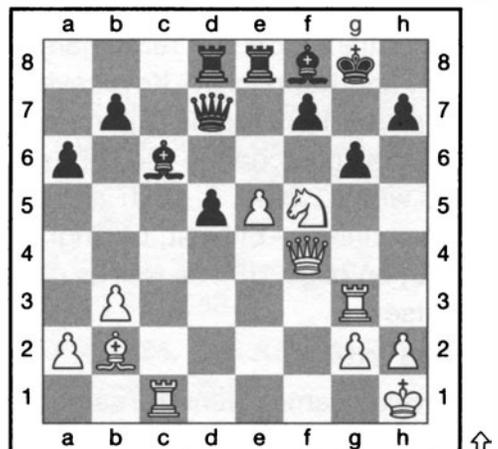

Once again 24. ♞xf5 is answered by 24...d4.

24...♞fe8

There is no other defence against the threat of 25. ♜h6 and 26. ♞h3.

25. ♞xf5 ♔f8

Now 25...d4 fails to 26. ♞h6+ ♔g7 27. ♜xf7+ ♔xh6 28. e6.

26. ♖d4!

A beautiful move: blockade à la Nimzowitsch! The knight has joined the attack, now the bishop takes its place on the blockading square, and Black's light-squared bishop is reduced to the role of a large pawn.

26...♜e6

Black's clock was down to a few minutes, and so it was naturally hard for Yuri to decide on 26...f6!? which seems to be the best chance, although after 27. exf6 ♜e4 28. ♖f2 ♗f7 29. ♘e7 the material is equal but White retains an attack.

28. ♘e7+ also comes into consideration, e.g.: 28...♗f7 29. ♖g5!? (29. ♖f2±) 29...♜xd4 30. ♘xg6 ♖d6 31. ♘e5+ ♗xe5 32. ♖xe5 ♜g8 33. ♖h5+ ♗f8 34. ♖h6+ winning.

27. ♘h6+ ♗xh6

If 27...♗g7 28. ♜f1 ♗b5 29. ♖xf7+ ♖xf7 30. ♜xf7+ ♗h8! (but not 30...♗xh6 31. ♜h3+ ♗g5 32. ♗e3+ ♗g4 33. ♜g3+ ♗h5 34. ♜xh7+ ♗h6 35. ♜xh6#) no clear win is apparent, but 28. a4, followed by ♜f1 and ♘xf7, is better.

28. ♖xh6 ♜de8 29. ♜f1 ♖c7?

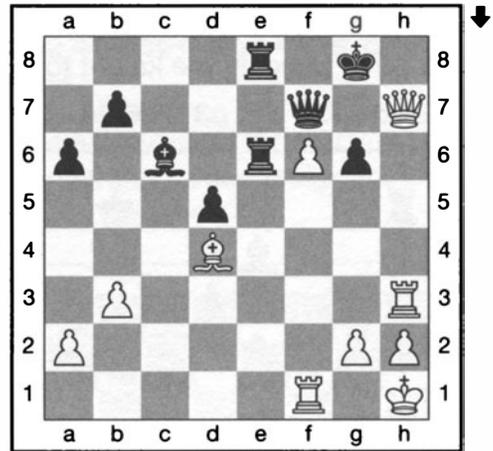

There is no salvation in 29...♜xe5 30. ♜e3 f6 31. ♗xe5 fxe5 32. ♜xe5, or even 31. ♜xf6! ♜xe3 32. ♜xg6+ hxg6 33. ♖h8+ ♗f7 34. ♖g7+ ♗e6 35. ♖f6#. However, Black can defend more stubbornly with 29...♗b5 30. ♜f5! (30. ♜f4 ♜xe5 31. h3±) 30...f6 31. ♜xf6 ♜xf6 32. exf6 ♜e1+ 33. ♗g1 ♜f1 34. ♜f3 ♜xf3 35. gxf3±.

30. ♜h3 f5 31. exf6 ♖f7

Or 31...♜e1 32. ♖xh7+! ♖xh7 33. f7+ ♖xf7 34. ♜h8#.

32. ♖xh7+!

Black resigned.

After the game my opponent congratulated me and mentioned Nimzowitsch. I think the famous teacher would have been pleased with one of his many pupils!

Nimzowitsch devised the following position to demonstrate the advantages of the blockade and its real worth.

White is the exchange and a pawn down in the endgame (!) but White is better according to Nimzowitsch. I recommend that you analyse this position for yourself and if you have a chess program I suggest that you use this position to test its “understanding” of chess.

You have now become familiar with examples of “classical blockade” (giving up the pawn centre in order to occupy it with pieces). But there are also other types of blockade.

The following three games are especially recommended for personal study (see page 113) and are included at this point in the German and English editions.

to prove this Black has to play 2...♟f6!. All other moves are weaker. At any event, in the Biel Interzonal neither Judit Polgár nor Victor Korchnoi was able to equalise in the opening.

2...d5 3. exd5 ♖xd5 4. ♟f3 ♟c6 5. d4 ♟f6 6. ♙e2 e6 7. 0-0 cxd4 8. cxd4 ♙e7 9. ♟c3 ♖d6 10. ♟b5 ♖d8 11. ♙f4 ♟d5 12. ♙g3 0-0 13. ♙c4 a6 14. ♙xd5 axb5!?

The theoretical main line is 14...exd5 15. ♟c7 ♖b8 (15...♙a7 is answered by 16. ♖b3 with the idea of ♖b6) 16. ♟e5, when Black faces a tough struggle to draw. The move in the game has been much less investigated.

15. ♙e4! ♙a6?!

15...b4 was played previously, with a slight advantage to White.

16. ♖e2 f5?!

More critical is 16...♟xd4 17. ♟xd4 ♖xd4 18. ♖fd1 ♖b6.

17. ♙d3

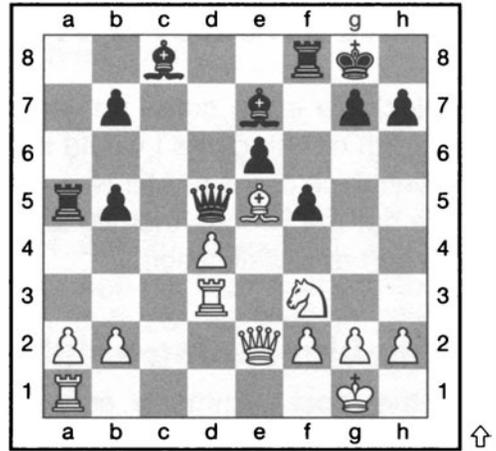

Played in order to keep options in the centre. However, it would have been simpler (perhaps also better) to play 17. ♙xc6 bxc6 18. ♙e5 ♖d5 19. b3, and White retains a small but stable advantage.

17...♙a5

Naturally it would have been bad to play 17...f4? 18. ♖e4 fxg3 19. ♖xh7+ ♟f7 20. ♖h5+ or 17...♟xd4? 18. ♟xd4 ♖xd4 19. ♙e5 and 20. ♙xb5, followed by 21. a4. But 17...♟b4!/? deserved attention, e.g.: 18. ♙xb5!/? f4 19. ♙xa6 bxa6 20. ♙xf4 ♖xf4 21. ♖ac1 with a very unclear position. However, this variation did not appeal to Korchnoi.

18. ♖fd1 ♟b4 19. ♙e5 ♟xd3 20. ♖xd3 ♖d5

(see next diagram)

21. ♟e1!

The knight heads for f4 – the best square for this piece.

21...♙d7

White would have a clear advantage after 21...♖xa2 22. ♖g3 ♙f6 23. ♙xf6 ♖xf6 24. ♖xa2 ♖xa2 25. ♖xb5.

22. ♖g3 ♖f7

If 22...♙f6 then 23. ♟d3 ♖xa2 24. ♖xa2 ♖xa2 25. h3 and the white initiative is even more dangerous.

23. ♟d3!?

During the game I remembered that I was playing against Korchnoi, who likes to take pawns. But I would not have been able to forgive myself after the game if I had chosen the small-minded 23. b3.

23...♖xa2

Played almost without thinking.

24. ♖c1

I was very pleased with my position and could not see a decent move for Black. For instance the natural 24...♙c6 would be answered by 25. ♟f4 with the idea of 25...♖c4 26. ♖e3 ♖a4 27. ♙xg7.

24...♖a6! 25. ♟f4

Mission accomplished; the knight has reached the desired destination.

30. ♜xc1 ♜xc1 31. ♜g3+ (31. f3♞) 31... ♛h8
32. ♜e3 ♜a1 33. a4 White has a slight advantage, but 24... ♛xf4! 25. ♜xf4 ♛h7! is unclear.

25. ♛xe6!± ♜xe6 26. h5 ♛e7 27. ♛d3 ♛h7 28. ♜e1 ♜g8?

Exploiting a weak colour complex

This theme is closely linked to that of blockade, since weak squares are in fact a prerequisite for establishing a blockade.

Game 67

Sveshnikov – Kupreichik

Russian Cup, Kiev 1984

Sicilian Defence B22

1. e4 c5 2. c3 ♖a5?!

It is curious that it was Dr. Tarrasch, widely considered to be a dogmatist, who introduced this “lateral” queen attack into practice. In any case, this move violates various opening principles and is inadequate for fighting for equality.

3. ♗f3

White has a wide choice of attractive continuations, for instance 3. ♗a3 or 3. g3.

3...♗c6 4. a3!?

The inventor of the 2. c3 variation, Semyon Alapin, handled the opening rather uncertainly in the afore-mentioned game against Tarrasch: 4. ♗a3 e6 5. ♗c4 ♖c7 6. d4 cxd4 7. ♗xd4?! a6 8. ♗d3 b5 9. ♗e3 ♗f6 10. 0-0 ♗b7 11. ♗f3 ♗d6⇒ (Alapin – Tarrasch, Vienna 1898). 8. cxd4 ♗f6 9. ♗d3 d5 10. e5 ♗d7

This position resembles a French Defence with 3. e5 but in a form highly favourable for White. First he gains control of the c-file, and then he switches play to the kingside.

Exchange sacrifice to establish a blockade

Game 70

Reshevsky – Petrosian

Candidates Tournament, Zürich 1953

"The exchange sacrifice 25... ♖e6! made by Petrosian deeply impressed me. It is a purely positional sacrifice with a quiet move, without any checks or visible threats! Simply to secure d5 for the knight!" (Tal)

Now White could have played 26. h4! with the idea of h5 and ♖g3, attacking g7 (Bronstein) but the game went otherwise:

Piece sacrifice to establish a blockade

This idea also occurs occasionally in practice. I invite the reader himself to select some examples.

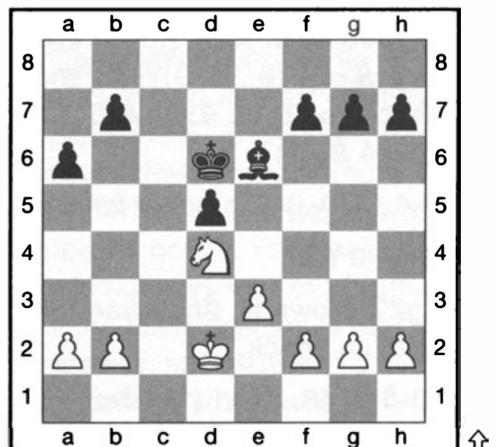

Blockade in the endgame

a) the advantage of a blockading knight against a bishop

Let us examine another classical example.

Game 73

Flohr – Capablanca

White has a solid advantage. The study of such endgames is a separate subject, so we shall just note this position and observe the course of the struggle.

(see next diagram)

The blockade on the dark squares gives White a clear advantage. It is very difficult for Black to defend, since he lacks counterplay. It is well worth studying this type of endgame. Sometimes Black escapes thanks to some tactical nuances, as happens here, but most of the time he does not.

and in time trouble Black was unable to save the ending, although obviously the play of both sides could be improved.

Game 76

Sveshnikov – Yakovenko
Ekaterinburg 2002

Two Knights Defence C55

This game was played in the Russian Team Championship. My opponent was helped in his preparation by his team-mate Alexander Potapov, who had easily made a draw with me in the Two Knights Defence a few years earlier. He advised Dmitry Yakovenko to play the same variation.

14...♖xf6 15. ♖c5 ♔f5 16. c3 ♖g6 17. f3!

An important move: the scope of the opposing light-squared bishop must be restricted. A very interesting position now arises. Normally White strives to achieve an advantage in development and to start an attack, but here the picture is quite different. The plan is to restrict the activity of Black's light-squared bishop and enter an endgame with bishops of opposite colour. You would think that White would not have very much advantage, but in fact the black position is very difficult, almost hopeless, as Yakovenko could testify. White's advantage is based on a blockade. The playing strength of the black player has nothing to do with it - there is simply no opportunity for him to demonstrate it. I won this game very easily.

12. ♗xd8+ ♘xd8 13. 0-0-0+ ♘c7
14. ♘d5+ ♔xd5 15. ♖xd5 ♘d7 16. ♔d3

At first sight it seems we have a dead-drawn ending with opposite-coloured bishops. But White has a range of small advantages, the most important being that he can blockade Black's centre pawns with his bishop. Furthermore the h7 and f7 pawns are weak, and White has a pawn majority on the queenside. Thus in fact Black faces a difficult defence.

16... ♖ag8 17. g3 h5?!

Black should definitely have limited himself to the more modest 17...h6!?, since now White can quite easily create a passed pawn on the h-file. Also interesting is 17...♗b6 18. ♖b5 ♗d6, and White will lose time bringing the rook back into play.

18. ♗e4 b6

18...h4 19. g4.

19. ♖hd1 ♖d8 20. c3 ♗e7 21. ♗f5 ♗b8

22. ♖xd8!

Just as in the previous example, White is happy to exchange all the rooks. He will be even happier if the knights also come off, after which the “pure” endgame of opposite-coloured bishops will be very difficult (perhaps even lost) for Black.

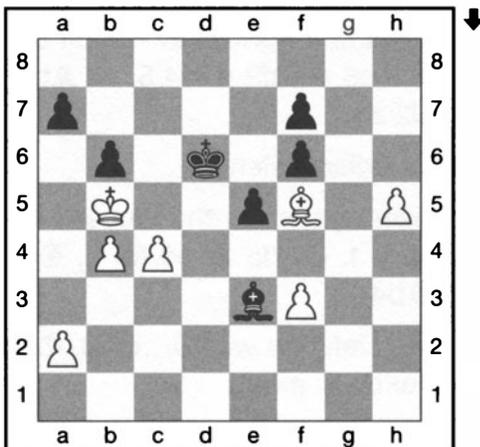

22... ♖xd8 23. ♖xd8 ♗xd8 24. h4!

The h-pawn is fixed, and soon White will set up his first passed pawn.

24... ♗a6 25. g4 ♗f8

Here 25...hxg4 26. fxg4 would be even worse for Black, since his centre pawns are immobilised, and White would have a protected passed pawn.

c) Blockade of the king or an entire wing

Often the side with the advantage uses his better development to pass directly into an endgame in which, thanks to the blockade, he shuts the enemy king (and sometimes even the whole wing) out of the game.

and White won. The similarity between the two games is amazing, wouldn't you agree?

On the way to assimilating a particular topic, chess students are usually expected to memorise a lot of different ideas, but when the time comes for them to put their knowledge into practice, it is not so easy. And this is understandable, given the wide variety of ideas and especially positions. To help my students gain a better grasp of a particular topic, I always try to link the ideas to a particular opening scheme with a particular pawn structure. In my view, this type of lesson gives more tangible results: it becomes much easier to recall and apply an idea.

Let us return to our topic. I suggest the following classification by opening:

Typical openings for mastering the subject of "Blockade".

For White:

- 1) French Defence with 3. e5;
- 2) Two Knights Defence with 4. d4 exd4 5. e5;
- 3) Sicilian Defence with 4...e5 or 5...e5 (the blockading knight).

For Black:

- 1) Abrahams-Noteboom Variation of the Queen's Gambit Semi-Slav – 1. d4 d5 2. c4 e6 3. ♖c3 c6 4. ♖f3 dxc4 5. a4 ♙b4 6. e3 b5 7. ♙d2 a5;
- 2) King's Indian Defence;
- 3) Ragozin System in the Queen's Gambit Declined – 1. d4 d5 2. c4 e6 3. ♖c3 ♖f6 4. ♖f3 ♙b4!?
- 4) Sicilian Defence with 5...e5 6. ♖db5 d6 7. ♖d5 ♖xd5 8. exd5;
- 5) Nimzo-Indian Defence.

I am sure that the theme of blockade is not confined to these openings. I hope that in this respect readers and chess trainers will share their experiences and observations. In conclusion, I should like to present an example from one of my own games as a junior.

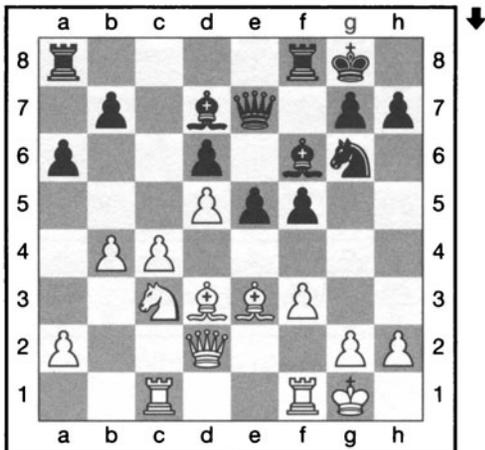

Game 80

Araslanov – Sveshnikov

Cheliabinsk 1965

Sicilian Defence B33

1. e4 c5 2. ♘f3 ♘c6 3. d4 cxd4 4. ♘xd4 ♘f6 5. ♘c3 e5 6. ♘db6 d6 7. ♘d5 ♘xd5 8. exd5 ♘e7 9. c4 ♘g6 10. ♙d3 ♙e7 11. 0–0 0–0 12. ♙e3 a6 13. ♘c3 f5 (13...♙g5!?) 14. f3 (14. ♚b3) 14...♙f6 15. ♚c1 ♙d7 16. ♚d2 ♚e7 17. b4

The diagram position is typical of both the King's Indian and the Sicilian Defence with 4...e5 or 5...e5.

17...e4 18. fxe4 f4 19. ♙f2 ♙e5 20. ♙e2 ♘h4 21. ♙d4 ♙xd4+ (21...f3!) 22. ♚xd4 f3! 23. gxf3 ♙h3 24. ♚e3 ♘g2 25. ♚f2 ♘f4 26. ♚fd1 ♚f6 27. ♙f1 ♚g6+ 28. ♘h1 ♙g2+ 29. ♙xg2 ♚xg2 30. ♚e1

Now 30...♚e5! would have given Black the advantage, but I played something else and the game ended in a draw. I found the double pawn sacrifice for the blockade (the manoeuvre ♙f6–e5, followed by f3, ♘g2, ♘f4) on my own, but at that time I had not even heard of blockade, I just played chess. In that tournament I gained the norm for first category. I have included this game to encourage you not to be afraid of experimenting, to have confidence in your own powers. If a first category player is able to play in that way, without any special knowledge, then after studying this chapter you the reader should be able to manage even better.

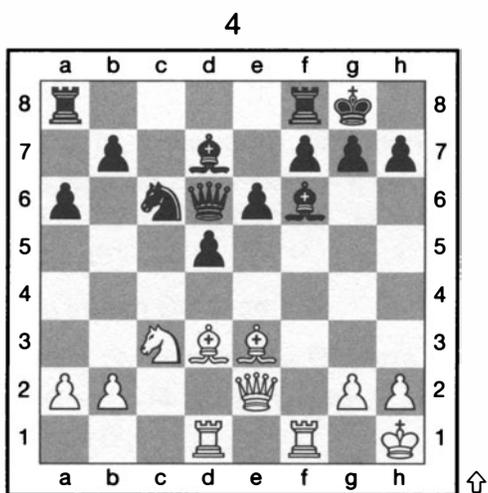

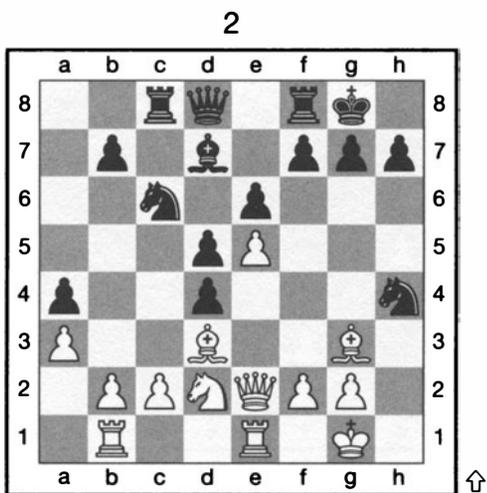

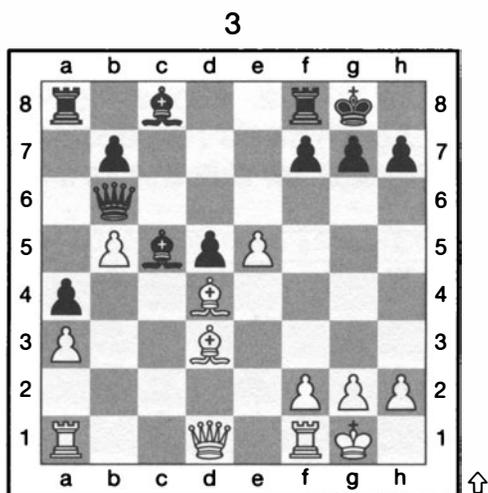

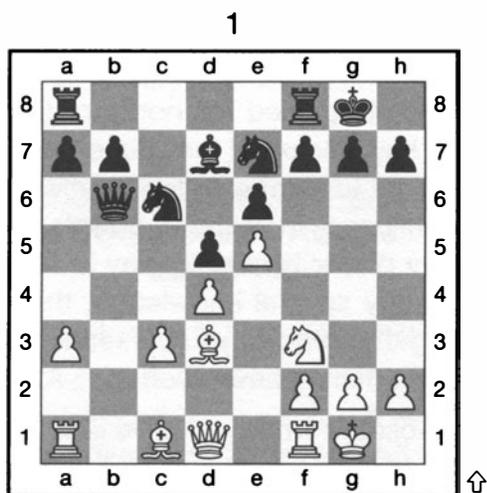

To consolidate what you have learnt in this chapter, I suggest some homework. Find examples of blockade in your own games and try to classify them according to themes. If you think your own playing standard is too low for this, use games by modern grandmasters. Good luck!

Black's last move was 11...♜e7?? and after 12. b4+– the bishop is lost. This is one of the most common traps in the French Defence, taking the lives of a multitude of bishops through many generations.

'I consider this book to be a real manual, original in its conception and excellent in its execution. It not only teaches you how to play a specific variation of the French Defence, but it also helps you understand many strategic ideas and their practical application in the middlegame, which for the majority of players is even more important.'

Anatoly Karpov, 12th world chess champion

The well-known grandmaster and theoretician Evgeny Sveshnikov has used the Closed Variation (1.e4 e6 2.d4 d5 3.e5) more than 150 times in tournament play with a score of more than 70%. Many theoretically important games have been excluded by the author from 'official' chess databases, and here they are exclusively published for the first time.

The present Volume 1 (Basic Course) contains the following main chapters:

- Historical overview of the Closed Variation;
- Plans for White and Black on the basis of thoroughly annotated games;
- A lesson on the blockade;
- 70 test positions: what would you play?

This two-volume work is intended for a broad range of chess enthusiasts. The author guarantees that anyone making a thorough study of the available material can expect an improvement in his playing strength in this system of approximately 200 Elo points.
